FOREWORD

In the preparation of a memorial book for a limited edition to be distributed among the heads of the several councils and committees who directed the activities of "the army of civilians without whose whole-hearted services mere fighting would have been useless," it has been deemed desirable to curtail particulars of transient or purely personal interest and present a general outline of wartime conditions, operations and issues as they affected the people of Utah.

To follow the movements of enlisted men from this state would be to write a history of the war during a dreadful year and a half of incessant fighting, for there were Utah boys among the Allies on every front and in almost every battle after we got fairly started. Any satisfactory account of their military exploits would require many such volumes and must be left to the future. This record has no such pretentious aim. The information it is intended to preserve has been condensed in order to print, for the first time, a bare list of those who wore the uniform, while a register of all who served faithfully without uniforms would be at least as long again.

This book will contain a brief review of the causes which led to the war, a summary of events which involved this government, a short description of conditions in the battle zone to indicate that our boys had not embarked on a pleasure excursion, a synopsis of the engagements in which Utah men were known to have participated, and a roster of our enlisted or inducted soldiers, sailors, marines, doctors and nurses, as complete as official records show after five years of compilation. In giving a digest of the general activities of the State Council of Defense and kindred organizations, care has been taken to eliminate details which invite odious comparisons between counties or towns, all of which were loyal to a high degree, and to avoid a possible renewal of controversies which were local and temporary, or incident to the tension of the time. Most residents were ready and willing to comply with the rules promulgated by the government and applied by its representatives.

If the salient features of the war period are presented in a way to revive interest and prevent the lessons of the great conflict from being forgotten, the purpose of this book shall have been attained.

Courtesies extended by the Executive office and the office of the Adjutant General of the state are hereby acknowledged.

OFFICIAL ROSTER

It may be many years before final corrections are made in the various state rosters of those who answered the call to arms during the World War. The office of the Adjutant General of Utah has only such card records as have been furnished by the War Department at Washington. Names are sometimes listed for one state when they belong to another. Adjustments are arranged as rapidly as the facts are discovered. Ex-service men and women should see that they are properly enrolled, as the record is one in which the people of Utah will ever take the utmost pride. Outside of the official lists, as printed herein, the following names have been verified:

Auerbach, Herbert S. ..................Salt Lake Maj., 2-8-18, 1-14-19, Ord C
Nibley, Joel ..........................Salt Lake Capt., 6-15-18, 12-6-18, Ord Leg

Bamberger, Clarence G..............Salt Lake Capt., 1-5-18, 12-19-18, Ord C
Lamb, Harold ..........................Salt Lake Lieut.

Clark, J. Reuben.....................Salt Lake Maj., 2-8-17, 12-18-18, JAGD
Van Wagoner, John ...............Salt Lake Lieut.

Among the "Dollar-a-Year men from Utah, who gave their time to essential war work, were Messrs. Daniel C. Jackling, John M. Browning, Lafayette Hanchett and Ernest Bamberger.

MEMORY GROVE

In a picturesque glen of twenty acres, situated at the entrance of City Creek Canyon, within easy walking distance from the heart of Salt Lake City, the Gold Star Mothers and Service Star Legion of this section have planned and planted a memorial grove, dedicated to the enduring memory of the Utah boys who made the supreme sacrifice, in camp or field, during the World War. Mrs. E. O. Howard, whose son, Captain James B. Austin, was one of the first Utah officers to fall in action, is chairman of the committee which has the consummation of this worthy project in charge. Memory Grove promises to become one of the most beautiful wooded parks in the West, as well as a hallowed resort for patriots of all nationalities and all ages, who sympathize with the cause of human liberty and believe in the principles of popular government.

Utah in the World War

CHAPTER I

Causes of the World War

When one has been drawn into an unsought controversy, from which he emerges with a feeling of responsibility for results, it is but natural to revert to the beginning, to consider the cause, to review the issues involved, to recall the difficulties encountered, and to explain the peculiar circumstances which impelled participation. This may be not so much for his own satisfaction as for the enlightenment of those who live after him.

No record of the part Utah took in the World War would seem complete unless it traced the more important steps leading to the conflict and offered some statement of the reasons why our government felt obligated to take sides. Nor may the courage and patriotism of a people engaged in war be properly appraised without some understanding of their honesty of purpose, the necessity for their action, the character of the undertaking, the risks incurred and the sacrifices made.

That the United States abandoned its traditional policy of strict neutrality at a critical moment, that we suddenly began active preparations for a long war on a plan of such magnitude that the enemy was staggered and never regained his equilibrium, that our men, money and munitions turned the scale when civilization wavered in the balance, are facts with which all are more or less conversant. But there have been vague conjectures as to our real motives; some question has been raised about the wisdom of sending our armies to foreign shores; while misunderstandings appear to exist concerning the actual part Americans took in the greatest conflict of all time.

In order that those who receive and preserve this abstract of the wartime activities of Utah people, may estimate and appreciate their part in the victory won for humanity, it has been deemed advisable to present a few historical facts and comparative statistics.
Altho many causes have been advanced for the war which encircled the earth, involved every nation of military importance, devastated Europe and threatened popular government, there are reasons to believe that the conflict was inevitable. While racial, political, economic, industrial and military differences were factors in precipitating the catastrophe, it was really a clash between two traits of human development; between the arrogance of autocracy on the one hand and the resentment of democracy on the other; between the champions of hereditary right to rule and the exponents of individuality, independence and equal opportunity; between the knighthood of the past and the manhood of the present. In the scheme of evolution such tests of power and fitness are unavoidable.

During the past century the greatest change in national life throughout the world, according to Elihu Root, "has been the advance and spread of democratic government, and the correlative decrease in the extent and power of autocratic and dynastic government." That imperialism should view with apprehension the encroachments of democracy and should eventually seek an opportunity to curb the growing independence of mankind was merely the prompting of an elemental instinct of self preservation. The lords and legions of absolutism, with one notable exception, foregathered under the royal banner of Germany. Russia’s position was fixed by political jealousies and racial animosities. The immediate incentive to war was the bitterness between Germans and Slavs in Austria, culminating in the assassination of an Austrian prince which furnished a trivial pretext for the unwarranted invasion of Serbia.

No more fitting leader for the hosts of imperialism could be found than William the Second. With a fanaticism almost inconceivable in this age of enlightenment and tolerance, he believed in the divine right of kings. He held himself to be the chosen instrument of God’s will on earth, and worshipped power as the worldly manifestation of divinity. In the school of perverted philosophy founded by Nietzsche, the Kaiser stood at the head of his class. To the teachings of the talented madman who was finally committed to an insane asylum where he ended his days of delirium in 1900, the Kaiser added the practical policies of Bismarck. Out of the dreams of the one and the diplomacy of the other was created the college of Kaiserism, from which all the kindergartens, graded schools, academies and universities of the Empire drew inspiration and sustenance.

Nietzsche declared that “there are two classes of people, masters and slaves, and a distinct system of morality for each;” that the code of the master is right because he can enforce it, and that “the slave morality is fit only for shopkeepers, Christians, cows, women, Englishmen and other democrats.” He reviled Christian tolerance as depravity, branded humanitarian sentiments as hypocrisy and denounced democracy as a mutiny of the slave class, or common people. Paraphrasing a scriptural quotation he said: “Blessed are they who make wars for they shall inherit the earth. Ye shall love peace only as a means to new wars. It is said that a good cause will hallow even war; but I say that a good war halloweth any cause.”

The ruling class in Germany held similar views and many leaders expressed them. Moltke said: “Perpetual peace is a dream and not even a beautiful dream; but war is a link in the divine system of the Universe.” Treitschke said: “Efforts directed to the abolition of war are not only foolish, but absolutely immoral, and must be stigmatized as unworthy of the human race.” General Von Roehl, discussing the imminence of the recent war, said: “Only one people has the right to play a leading role in world politics and that people is the German people.” The celebrated Professor Ostwald declared that “Germany, thanks to her genius for organization, or social efficiency, has attained a stage of civilization far greater than that of all other peoples. Germany should reorganize Europe. I believe the moment has come for remodeling the map.”

Such was the “kultur” of autocracy which taught contempt for popular government and resented the growth of democracy as the presumption and insolence of “the slave class.” Its slogan, as expressed by the Kaiser, was this: “The king at the head of Prussia, Prussia at the head of Germany, Germany at the head of the world.” An organ of royalty, the Deutsche Zeitung, hailed the war as the dawn of “The Day” for which Germany had been long waiting. In a characteristic editorial it exclaimed: “Down with the world conscience! Away with the spirit of human brotherhood! Let the German spirit of power alone be our guide! Its cry is for more power! More German power! That is the legacy bequeathed us by our dead heroes, and written in the flame letters of their blood. He whose world conscience, or sense of responsibility toward humanity causes him to say or write anything less than what the power of the sword commands is, and always will be, a feeble political dreamer, a gloomy wanderer in the clouds.” This was “Nietzsche Kultur” which influenced German thought and conduct down to the abdication of the Kaiser and his unceremonious departure from the fatherland.

In some form or other these lessons had been impressed on the school children of the German Empire for many years. The Kaiser once declared in a public address: “When I succeeded to the throne I was convinced that the royal theatre, like the schools and universities, must be an instrument of the monarch.” Not only were children taught, but adults were not allowed to forget, the lessons of Kaiserism. Their press, preachers, teachers and leaders in every walk of life prepared the German people to believe in their racial superiority, their collective efficiency, their destiny to conquer, their duty to spread “kultur” and in the divinity of their ruler; to be ever ready to serve the crown which alone could assure their ascendency; to sink their individuality into the necessities of the state when so required; to be vigilant against the covert designs of envious governments which were lying in wait to invade their country to rob them of the fruits of industry and confuse their plans for the ultimate mastery of mankind.

The churches were made instruments of imperialism just as the schools and theatres were. Every clergyman, taking the oath required of him, swore: “I will be submissive, faithful and obedient to his royal majesty. I will inform his majesty of any proposals made, either in my diocese, or elsewhere, which might prove injurious to the state. I will preach the word as his gracious majesty dictates.” Under this hypnotic influence, exerted by master minds from the cradle to the grave, the masses did their work and thinking. It is ever gratifying in youth and pleasing in maturity to be constantly assured that you are a superman of a superior race, and it is one of the most natural things to believe that your king and your country, like your wife and your children, are the best, most promising, most gifted, and most deserving in the world.

In every grade of schooling, in every temple of worship, in every place of entertainment, the idea was fostered that the German leaders had evolved a higher order of society which duty demanded should be forced upon humanity. Being sentimental the average German would have preferred teaching by precept or example, but this was a slow process, the world was large, mankind was dense and time was flying. There was nothing to do but carry "kultur" as the conquistadors had carried religion, on the point of the sword. Those who rejected the message would be considered blind to their own interests, and those who resisted would be scorned as hopelessly stupid, mentally deficient or groveling in selfish individualism.

While stern and exacting the Kaiser was a considerate master in many particulars. He schooled his people in obedience, in reverence for royalty, in patience under adversity, in all the arts and tricks of war. He had supervised their training in frugality, efficiency, sustained effort and self-sacrifice. He had also cultivated national pride, encouraged industry that raised taxes to support the army, and stimulated and rewarded ingenuity which produced guns, gases, germs, poisons, and other agencies of death and destruction. He had honeycombed rival powers with intrigue and established an elaborate spy system in every capital of importance. While other potentates had been puzzling over problems of trade and taxation, while republics had periodically changed their leaders and policies, while statesmen of other lands, serene and satisfied with prosperity and luxury, were being lulled to lassitude by siren songs of amity and peace, the Kaiser was preparing for battle. Doubtless he has been blamed for the war largely because his government was the only one to see it coming and to plan accordingly. It were more accurate, possibly, to hold him responsible for the barbarities of the conflict rather than for the war itself.

He could not have averted war had he been so disposed. The military power he had flattered, fed and fostered for a quarter of a century, like Frankenstein's monster, menaced and drove him on. The ever increasing expense of maintaining a constantly growing army and navy gradually overcame the ability of taxpayers to carry the burden. Territorial expansion was an actual necessity. The impending crisis could not wait longer for a peaceful conquest of the markets of the world. Rather than further risk curtailment of commerce, a downfall of credit, a closing of factories and a reduction of taxes, the financiers and statesmen of Germany preferred a war which promised early action, speedy victory, world power and commercial supremacy. Between the bankers and the junkers there was no escape from immediate war, while an ultimate break was inevitable in any event.

Besides, there were many influential chieftains of the imperial army and navy who had helped to build "the greatest military machine of all the ages," who took pride in its perfection and longed to see it in action; who drank to "The Day" on all public and social occasions; who began to realize that they were growing old with diminishing chances to participate in that orgy of conquest and vengeance which had been the dream of their lives. The Emperor of Austria, their natural ally, was over eighty years of age and might be succeeded any day by one of whose unquestioning acquiescence there were serious doubts.

To the world, therefore, the war was inevitable; to Germany alone it was welcome.
CHAPTER II
Steps Leading to the War

While the primal cause of the World War is found in human nature, the more obvious causes may be grouped as racial, political, economic, industrial, educational and military. To these agencies we may trace the jealousies, rivalries, hatreds and bickerings which hastened the catastrophe and influenced the alignments.

Diplomatic interference in the several readjustments of population and boundaries in the Balkan states, dictated by political expediency rather than racial needs and preferences, aroused among the Slavs an intense resentment against the arrogant officiousness of the Teutons. There had been grudges of long standing between the Germans and French. Memories of Napoleon's triumphs still rankled in the Prussian heart. Dreams of recovering Alsace-Lorraine stimulated the military pride and the fondest hopes of France. The crisis of 1913 in Morocco, by which British intervention turned a coveted advantage to France, irritated Germany almost to the breaking point, while the blocking of the Berlin to Bagdad railway project, the ownership of the Suez Canal, the control of Oriental commerce, the command of the Mediterranean at Gibraltar, the alliance with Russia and France, all combined to aggravate that racial animosity of Germans for the British so eloquently expressed in the "Hymn of Hate" and in the concerted prayer of her people—"Gott strafe England."

As a result of incessant admonitions disseminated through the schools and gravely discussed in the homes, emphasized by periodical alarms sounded in the press and in public meetings, the German people became obsessed with an idea that their country was threatened and oppressed by enemies who encircled her, watched her every movement, coveted her riches and envied her prosperity; who had already closed the natural outlets of her commerce and had discriminated against her products by preferential tariffs. They were convinced that malicious rival nations were not only impeding her commercial and industrial progress, but were preparing to dispute that military supremacy which had been the pride and protection of Germany. While such feelings did not lead directly to war, they paved the way for it and intensified the bitterness with which it was waged.

The immediate excuse, without which some other might have been utilized, was of less concern to the German government or people than were a dozen other points of disagreement. But General Von Bernhardi, who had warned his people that they were facing "world power or downfall," explained the policy of the General Staff in his book entitled "Germany and the Next War." He said:

"Let it be the task of our diplomacy to so shuffle the cards that we may be attacked, but we must not hope to bring about this attack by waiting passively. We must inaugurate an active policy which, without attacking France, will so prejudice her interests and those of England that both these states will feel themselves compelled to attack us. Opportunities for such procedure are offered both in Africa and Europe, and any one who has attentively studied prominent political utterances can easily satisfy himself on that point."

It is not difficult, therefore, to comprehend how the assassination of an Austrian prince, on the streets of an Austrian town, by an Austrian subject of Slavic descent, was the match that started the conflagration. The crime was committed in broad daylight, the perpetrator was promptly arrested and convicted and four of his older associates were executed; but the actual assassin was a mere school boy, too young for the death penalty under local laws, so he was sent to prison where he died. Aside from the court trial there was a political investigation conducted by an official who was then under conviction for the forgery of documents designed to implicate and injure leading Slavish subjects. Out of this secret inquisition came charges that a Serbian conspiracy, of which this boy was only a tool, had been disclosed. Few people of standing credited the story, owing to the unreliability of its source and the improbability of Serbians conniving at the death of the only one among the real leaders of Austria believed to sympathize with them; and there were some who boldly hinted that the plot had been hatched in Vienna because of this suspected sympathy. The murder was regarded by Austrian nobility as one of the many tragedies of the House of Hapsburg, and was treated by Austrians in general as a state bereavement without international significance.

But here was an opportunity which could not be overlooked. Although it did not appear to be any of Germany's business the Kaiser nevertheless sent out a call for his war directors. By the 5th of July, 1914, they had assembled at Potsdam and sent to Vienna the sinister and suggestive assurance that "Austria had Germany's full sympathy and in two weeks would have her entire support in an immediate attack on Serbia." From the German point of vantage it was desirable that Austria, with a population of 61,000,000 people and an army of 7,000,000 men, should begin the war by attacking Serbia, a diminutive state of 3,000,000 people with a small, almost exhausted army just back from the Balkan campaign. The two weeks stipulated were evidently needed for the disposition of securities likely to be affected by a declaration of war.

Any supposition that Germany anticipated Austria's need of reinforcements in the attack to be made on little Serbia is absurd on the face of it. But Russia was confidently expected to take the part of her kinsmen, and there was a likelihood of France tendering support to Russia. What England might do in such a contingency was a problem yet to be solved. But the cards had been shuffled as Bernhardi had planned, the Kaiser had cut them when he suddenly departed on a yachting trip in the Baltic Sea, the hands had been dealt and the game was on. When the wireless message reached him July 24th announcing Austria's ultimatum of the day before, the Kaiser turned to his officers on the "Hohenzollern" and said "Everything is moving." On the night of the 26th he reached Berlin.

When Austria, twenty-five days after the tragedy sent an ultimatum to Serbia, allowing but forty-eight hours for a reply, the plot became apparent. Within the time set Serbia notified the Austrian government that all demands were acceded to except permission to usurp her judicial and legislative powers in reference to trials and punishments of Serbian subjects, which point was to be submitted to the Hague. Strenuous efforts to preserve peace were promptly begun by the British, French and Russian governments. The contents of the Serbian note were communicated to Austria on the night of the 25th of July. On the same day a message was sent from Berlin to Vienna saying: “It is believed here that a negative reply from Serbia will be followed on Austria’s part by an immediate declaration of war.” In the same dispatch the Austrian government was “counseled with the greatest insistence to pass immediately to action and thus put the world in face of an accomplished fact.” Next day, in the British House of Commons, Sir Edward Grey announced that he understood Germany to favor mediation, failure of which might lead to “the greatest catastrophe which could befall Europe, the consequences of which would be incalculable.” But on the 27th of July a dispatch, marked “strictly secret,” though since published, was sent to Vienna from Berlin saying: “Propositions of mediation from England will be brought to the knowledge of your Excellency. You are assured that the German government in no way identifies itself with these propositions and that it is absolutely against their being taken into consideration.”

On the 28th of July, 1914, Austria formally declared war against Serbia, and next day the bombardment of Serbian cities was begun. Russia protested and began the mobilization of troops. On July 30th Germany sent Russia an ultimatum demanding a cessation of army movements within twenty-four hours. This was an insolent request and compliance within the time limit was an impossibility. War on Russia was declared by Germany August 1, 1914, and on the following day Belgium was assaulted without the slightest provocation. After vain appeals for the recognition of Belgium’s neutrality Great Britain declared war on Germany August 4th, 1914. France immediately proclaimed a state of war and the greatest conflict of history was under way.

In turn and in time Montenegro, Japan, Portugal, Italy, Rumania, Greece, the United States, Siam, China, Brazil, Guatemala, Nicaragua and a half dozen smaller governments issued declarations of war against the Central Powers. The Turks and Bulgarians cast their lot with the Teutons and the war was carried into Asia and Africa. Within a year Serbia and Belgium had been sacked and sacrificed, northern France was devastated, Zeppelins had bombed London, and many ships had been destroyed by submarines.
The "Lusitania," a Cunard passenger liner, was torpedoed May 7, 1915, and sunk with a loss of 1152 noncombatants. Three days later an apology was received from Germany, followed shortly by a proposal of reparation. After a long period of comparative immunity another Cunarder, the "Laconia" was sunk February 27, 1917, whereupon President Wilson immediately asked Congress for authority to arm outgoing American ships. A bill to this effect passed the House by a vote of 403 to 13, but was killed in the Senate by a filibuster led by Senator LaFollette. The congressional session ended March 3rd without action. On the 9th of March the President took matters into his own hands by proclaiming a policy of "armed neutrality" and equipping vessels for their protection, without awaiting the action of Congress. In retaliation German submarines sank three American steamships, the "Illinois," the "Memphis" and the "Vigilance," without warning and evidently without counting the probable cost.

The President then called a special session of Congress and, on the 2nd of April, asked it to declare a state of war with Germany. Within three days the necessary resolution had been drawn, presented, explained and passed by a vote of 82 to 6 in the Senate, and 373 to 50 in the House. On the 6th of April, 1917, President Wilson issued a formal declaration of war.
CHAPTER III

The Stage Set for America

This was not as other wars. Thirty millions of men were under arms. The battle line was four hundred miles in length. During the four and a quarter years of its duration more lives were sacrificed in this than in wars of all lands in the previous one hundred years. The dead numbered over 10,000,000 of the flower of earth's manhood. There were 18,000,000 wounded, 6,000,000 of whom were rendered hopeless wrecks. Over 6,000,000 prisoners were taken. It is estimated that 4,000,000 civilians were slaughtered by the Germans, Austrians and Turks in violation of the recognized rules of civilized warfare, under circumstances of wanton brutality.

These figures are almost beyond comprehension. The entire population of France at the beginning of the war was only 39,840,000 men, women and children. The French government mobilized 7,000,000 men, armed 5,000,000 and lost 4,300,000 in killed and disabled. The total number of soldiers actually killed in this war was greater than the pre-war populations of Belgium and Serbia combined. More prisoners were taken than there were men, women and children living in the populous land of Portugal. More non-combatants were massacred in cold blood than there were men and women in Greece. Had every able bodied male adult in the United States been killed or wounded the loss would not have exceeded the casualties of the World War.

For two years and a half this colossal and hideous conflict had been going on before the United States decided to enter. It has been observed that "war cannot come to a democracy as a policy—only as a necessity." Until the need became imperative our people were content to remain interested spectators. Yet they resented the spoliation of Belgium and sympathized with their historical friends in France. Belgium had been invaded without excuse and ravaged without mercy. Her heroic resistance, while brief and ineffectual insofar as her own immediate safety was concerned, gave France a little time in which to call her men from the shops and farms, and an opportunity to send her available troops to the front. By that time Belgium had paid the penalty of defending her national honor. Her territory was overrun, her cities were sacked, her villages in ruins, her churches desecrated, her army was annihilated, her peasantry exiled and toiling under Prussian masters, 30,000 of her townsmen had been assassinated under military orders, women had been abused and maltreated before the eyes of shackled fathers and husbands, and children mutilated and slain in the arms of their agonized mothers. Belgium suffered. No nation could suffer more and survive. Self-respect was her offense and geographical location her misfortune. Having less than one-tenth of Germany’s population her very weakness invited the unbridled excesses of ruthless militarism. With an army forty times as large as that of Belgium, the invaders had their will of the inoffensive little kingdom by the sea. Waste more wanton than that of the vandals who sacked Rome, deeds more atrocious than the scribes of ancient Israel recorded, massacres more barbarous than the limited intelligence of savage tribes could invent, tortures more cruel than the devilish ingenuity of the middle ages could devise, had marked the march of bloodthirsty power on its way to conquer and control the world.

The army of invasion trampled the rights and hearts of Belgium into the mire and reached France with whetted lust and growing arrogance. Like a tidal wave of doom it rolled across the peaceful valleys of the Meuse, the Yser and the Aisne. Where it found a happy and hopeful people singing at their work in fields and vineyards as laughing children played in door yards of contented homes, the scourge of ambition passed and laid its withering touch upon the land. For no military advantage whatever orchards were cut down, vineyards grubbed out, crops destroyed, cows and horses killed, houses burned, cities looted of priceless treasures of art and literature and venerable monuments of history and religion wrecked and ruined, while the roads were lined with bruised and bloodstained bodies of the old, the sick, the blind and the crippled who, because of their infirmities, had been unable to escape the monster. The highways and byways leading from the Belgian border to Paris were thronged with fleeing noncombatants, driving or pulling carts filled with their most cherished possessions, wheeling barrows over shell torn roads, carrying bundles or babies or household pets, cutting across fields, hurrying away from the wrath to come, stumbling, falling, helping each other, glancing back at the smoke ascending from their homes or the dust clouds raised by pursuing cavalry, now and then throwing away some treasured keepsake to lighten the load as they grew weaker and weaker from hunger and fatigue, yet spurred to final effort by terror and a forlorn hope that somehow somewhere they might reach a zone of safety.

To the very gates of the French capital the rabid wolves of autocracy pursued their quarry, beating down every obstacle with the brute power of numbers long trained for this very raid, driving back every force arrayed against them until in one month they reached Lagny, seventeen miles from Paris and only five miles from the encircling defenses. Here, as at Verdun, stood the immortal soul of France and swore they should not pass. Nor did they pass.

Back and forth surged the contending armies for days and weeks and months, straining and struggling almost hourly for advantage. Britain went to the rescue of France, and the line of Hindenburg wavered from the sledge-hammer blows of Haig and Bing and others, but the northern provinces remained under the heel of the oppressor until long after the Americans entered the war. From Amiens to Reims and north to Lille and Sedan, an area equal to that of New Jersey and Delaware combined, a fertile territory which had been the home of 4,000,000 people, lay a desert of desolation. Forests mowed down by cannon, fields pitted with craters of shell fire, roads seamed with trenches, townsites turned to blackened heaps of battered brick and stone, scattered homes reduced to pathetic piles of ashes, bits of tattered clothing fluttering in the wind, fragments of household furniture, broken implements of husbandry, charred books and records, scraps of letters and family pictures, here and there a toy or doll snatched from the dimpled hand of a frightened babe and torn to pieces as a kindergarten lesson in frightfulness, stumps of leveled orchards and clusters of unmarked graves—these were the visible signs of German occupation. From the dismal crypts of cathedral ruins came the stifled moans of young girls held in bestial bondage by the roystering officers of the Kaiser who were still drinking to the coming of "The Day" when they hoped to conquer and control the rest of the world. These victims of "kultur" had been kept in pits and cellars after seeing their fathers shot, their brothers deported to slavery and their mothers driven before the invading army to screen the gallant supermen of Germany from French fire. Most of these girls, reduced to idiocy by their harrowing experiences, perished from disease or neglect in their living graves. Some pitiful survivors were liberated after Ludendorff was eventually driven out of the hell of horror Hindenburg had made.

This was northern France in the year 1917. Over a hundred seething battlefields darted the dragon flies of air service; beneath them men were marching and counter-marching, moving guns and stores and camps, burrowing in the earth like badgers, standing in mud and slime for days without a change of clothing, eating when they could and what was handed them, while fumes of poison gas and barrage clouds enveloped their dugouts and the murky nights were lighted by the glare of bursting shells and flaming rockets. Now and then a charge was ordered and soldiers went over the top, through suffocating smoke and barbed wire entanglements, into the pelting hail of shot and shrapnel, gaining a few yards before they found refuge in soggy craters wrought by eruptions of destruction. At every momentary lull they dragged their wounded comrades to the rear and piled the bodies of the dead for sepulture.

Emergency hospitals on the front were chambers of horrors the like of which had never been seen in any previous war. Weary surgeons and white-faced attendants moved ceaselessly by night and day along the ever-changing rows of cots and stretchers, stanching the ebbing currents of life and patching mangled forms which had stood erect in the pride of manly perfection but a few short hours before. Great, gaping wounds were bared, some seared and ghastly, some raw and bleeding; and there were bodies cooked by liquid fire, and severed limbs, and shoulders stripped of flesh, and crushed hips, and jaws blown away leaving teeth exposed, and lips and tongues smashed to bloody pulp, and eye-balls torn from sockets. There the poor victims of barbaric war awaited the verdict of the doctors, suppressing moans of anguish, retching from the nausea of asphyxiating gas, writhing in paroxysms of pain, or comatose through nervous collapse or physical exhaustion, the glistening sweat of agony on every brow. At times the dead were sorted out and added to the heaps of stark and rigid forms awaiting burial, while attendants searched among the mass of human wreckage for lingering signs of life. Often the enemy singled out these carefully designated sanctuaries of suffering as targets for explosive bombs, when doctors, nurses and patients were slaughtered together, in callous disregard of every consideration of decency and the oldest rules of mortal combat.

This was war between civilized powers in the twentieth century of Christianity, in the greatest era of man's enlightenment, in the peak decade of moral legislation and philanthropic achievement. This was the nature of the conflict and the attitude of the combatants in April of 1917. Thus the stage was set for the entrance of the American army.
CHAPTER IV
Responsibility for Frightfulness

When a dazed world read the first accounts of Hindenburg's campaign of "frightfulness" there was a tendency to regard them as propaganda. It was inconceivable that any modern government laying claims to culture and civilization, would countenance such unspeakable and inhuman conduct on the part of troops disciplined to the most implicit obedience. Ambassadors from neutral countries verified the reports and entered an eloquent protest at Berlin. Many German people were likewise shocked and an explanation was demanded. The military staff first denied the charges and then gave out a manufactured explanation that civilians had attacked the invading army, had sold explosive cigarettes to soldiers, had used dum-dum bullets, had poisoned the wells, and that Belgian girls had amused themselves by tearing out the eyes of wounded Germans. On the 7th of September, 1914, Emperor William sent President Wilson a long cablegram cataloguing these atrocities alleged to have been committed by the women, children, priests and nuns of Belgium, which he claimed to have endured a while in patience before retaliating. Investigation showed his statement to be a tissue of lies without even a shadow of foundation.

The German scientist, Lorenz Miller, after an official inquiry, wrote and published an article in which he said: "No instance is known of persons having fired from towers of churches, with or without the help of priests. All we have been able to discover concerning alleged atrocities committed by women and priests in Belgium is shown to be false and altogether imaginary, without any exception."

After the close of the war the German government, in an official bulletin, withdrew the charges that dum-dum bullets had been made or used by the Allies or by their civilians. In an intercepted letter to his parents a German soldier gave the true version of the poisoned well legend as follows: "We reached the village and ran to the well to quench our thirst. A military guard was there and told us it was poisoned. Disappointed and embittered against the townspeople we hurried to the next well. The guard prevented us from drinking. In the center of the town was a large well with water flowing through two tubes into a long trough. Five soldiers were guarding it but we made a rush and drank with the avidity of animals. All quenched their thirst and no one became ill or died. Yet priests had been put to death because our commanders said they had poisoned the wells.” The obvious intent of these falsehoods was to inflame the soldiers against civilians and to season them for the fiendish orders subsequently issued.

In many instances where civilians were accused of sniping Germans, resultant investigations disclosed the fact that the Belgians had been deprived of their arms, and often of their liberty, before the alleged shooting began. Cases are recorded where German officers were killed by their own men in resentment against extreme brutality, while citizens were accused and made to pay the penalty. When autopsies revealed the truth, by showing the kind of bullets used, further examinations were discontinued. A Berlin newspaper, under date of October 22, 1914, said: “We have learned from authentic sources that the story of explosive cigars and cigarettes is nothing but a brazen invention. Not a single case of this kind has been established. In every instance efforts to verify these reports have demonstrated their inaccuracy.” Another newspaper, the Popular Gazette, of Cologne, stated positively that “no soldier with his eyes torn out, except in battle, had been found in any hospital or field ambulance; every inquiry has demonstrated the absolute falsity of these reports”. In response to an official inquiry the chief medical officer of a section where the alleged atrocities were said to have occurred sent this telegram to Berlin: “Sir, Happily there is no truth whatever in these stories.” Signed: Rautenberg.

In the face of these official and authentic denials the “Berliner Tageblatt” persisted in printing false accusations, while a pamphlet, approved by the Kaiser and signed by “ninety-three of the leading authors, artists and scholars of Germany”, not on the firing line but entirely in accord with the military idea, began its recital of imaginary outrages as follows: “We, as leaders of German Learning and Art, send forth to the United World of Culture a protest against the Lies and Slanders with which our Enemies endeavor to befoul Germany's Spotless Cause in the hard struggle for existence which has been forced upon her. The Belgians, whose barbaric behavior provoked retaliation, had long been prepared by their government to participate in the fighting. "What was sown in hate, was harvested in horror." Yet the Belgian authorities, never hostile to Germany before the invasion, had afterwards flooded their country with circulars advising the populace to submit to German occupation without any manifestations of resentment which might cause irritation.

In the absence of justification it is not easy to comprehend the ferocity of the invaders, except as a policy of "frightfulness" to intimidate other peoples who might be tempted to interfere with the march of conquest. Some light has been thrown on these dark pages of history by Germans themselves. A Prussian army surgeon, Dr. Benneke, stated to Sister St. Romauld, Superior of the hospital at Nyon: "You people would not accept peace as we proposed, so now we have orders to make war on civilians." An officer of the imperial army announced at Guiscard: "As Germany's peace offers have been rejected the war enters a new phase; henceforth we shall respect nothing." Nor did they, although excuses continued to be made when deemed advisable, while particularly revolting offences were blamed on unmanageable soldiers.

General Disforth, of the German army, gave out the following statement during the reign of terror in Belgium: "Take no notice of the accusations of barbarity leveled against us by foreign critics. Frankly, we are and must be barbarians, if the term applies to those who wage war relentlessly and to the utmost degree. There is nothing for us to explain. Every act of whatever nature committed by our troops for the purpose of disheartening, defeating and destroying our enemies is a brave act and a good deed and is fully justified. Germany stands as the supreme arbiter of her own methods. Let them call us barbarians. What of it? I hope that in this war we have earned the title of barbarians. Our troops must achieve an ultimate victory. What else matters?"

That was a clear expression of the German view point by one who scorned the subterfuges of counter-charges or pleas in justification. He believed that German power had the right to burn, ravish, torture and destroy in terrorizing the world into submission, and that every assassin, every incendiary, every rapist and every mutilator of children was a hero who was not only enjoying the prerogative of a conqueror but was curtailing the prospects of a hostile alien progeny. Every attempt to palliate these inexcusable crimes against the helpless noncombatant population of a subdued country, on the excuse that they were perpetrated by irresponsible soldiers under the influence of sudden rage and resentment, failed to convince even the dupes of degenerate despotism when the deliberate purpose of cold-blooded cruelty was thus revealed by the shameless confessions of exalted and trusted spokesmen.

Naturally the bloody-handed hordes of Turkey gravitated to the Central Powers. Here they might expect sympathy, understanding and comradeship instead of the loathing with which canting Caucasians had theretofore regarded them. Satiated or shamed by excesses, or possibly alarmed at the growing impatience of protesting powers, the Ottoman leaders were almost persuaded to moderate their policies toward the Greeks, Armenians and other Christians who had fallen under their savage jurisdiction. But evidently there had been some misunderstanding. Their conduct could not have been so reprehensible after all. They beheld the Germans, their mentors and models, their drill-masters and advisors, doing the same things in Belgium and Serbia, even boasting about it and proclaiming as right that which force could compel. If professed Christians could treat other Christians in this manner who should presume to question the conduct of any Musselman in his dealings with an unbeliever in his faith? And so, in the course of the war, 1,100,000 inoffensive Armenians, 900,000 Greek civilians, and 200,000 Syrian noncombatants were slaughtered, and their unprotected women outraged and enslaved, by these allies of the Kaiser. Kurds and Kultur went hand in hand.
CHAPTER V

Before the Declaration of War

Twelve days before war was declared by this government the people of Utah held a mammoth mass meeting in the tabernacle at Salt Lake City. Patriotic addresses were delivered by Governor Bamberger, who presided, by Mayor W. M. Ferry, by Senators Smoot and King, by Parson P. A. Simpkin and President F. C. Richmond of the Commercial Club. The vast auditorium was packed and all the speeches were full of fire. At the close of the program the following resolutions were presented and adopted amid deafening cheers:

"The United States of America is not a warlike or military government. It has engaged in four wars with foreign powers: the first for independence; the second for freedom of the seas and the right of American sailors and citizens to enjoy that freedom; the third for the protection of Americans on neutral and foreign soil; the fourth in the interest of oppressed and suffering humanity."

"WHEREAS, the United States Government now appears to be on the eve of another international conflict into which it is being forced to reassert all these principles of national right and honor; to safeguard its prestige and perpetuity as a Nation; to defend the freedom of its commerce; to compel respect for its long established rights; to protect the lives and liberties of its citizens on the high seas; to rebuke aggressive tyranny for its brutal disregard of the claims of civilization and pleadings of humanity; and—"

"WHEREAS, in its relations to other governments, the United States, for two years past, has borne and is now bearing with dignity and credit, the gravest responsibilities this or any other Republic has ever been called upon to face; and—"

"WHEREAS, every honorable effort has been made conscientiously to keep this country from being drawn into this the most savage, sanguinary, destructive and unnecessary, but far-reaching war the world has ever witnessed, and—"
"WHEREAS, the German government has denied to us the freedom of the seas; has destroyed ships and shipping; and, without justification or warning, has ordered or approved the treacherous assassination of American seamen and citizens on neutral waters outside of any defined or pretended zone of danger, and—

"WHEREAS, under the guise of friendship and the hospitality of the United States, the German government has, through its accredited official representatives, plotted to embarrass and injure this Nation by fomenting racial and political intrigues among our people; by the use of money or the promise of support; by the establishment of secret cabals, hostile organizations and schools of spies within our borders; by inflaming the minds of people in foreign lands, and inciting them to make war upon this country; and—

"WHEREAS, every open or covert attack on this government or on those who direct its destinies in war, invites insult and attack and is naturally construed by enemies as an evidence of domestic disunion or weakness, and should be rebuked and suppressed as a potential cause leading to war; and—

"WHEREAS, the time has come for all patriotic Americans to take an unequivocal stand with the Republic and the Flag and the President and to so announce their decision to the world; therefore be it—

"RESOLVED by this mass convention of representative citizens of the State of Utah, assembled in the Tabernacle at Salt Lake City, on this, the 26th day of March, 1917, that we solemnly reaffirm our allegiance to the Flag and the Republic; our faith in the Constitution of the United States; our confidence in the Commander-in-Chief of our Army and Navy; our devotion to the principles of human liberty and to the rights of the weak to immunity from torture, slavery, debasement and destruction by the strong; and we solemnly pledge ourselves here and now to loyally support the President of this Republic in whatever course may become necessary to enforce our rights as a people, to preserve our honor as a Nation and to protect the lives of our fellow citizens at home or abroad, on land or sea.

"RESOLVED, further, that a copy of these resolutions be prepared for presentation to the President of the United States by the Congressional Delegation from this State on behalf of the patriotic citizenship of Utah."
This declaration, made in advance of the declaration of war, is given as an indication of the spirit of the people of Utah. They had counted the cost but were prepared to pay it to the last farthing rather than surrender the rights or sacrifice the honor of their country. In all that multitude not a dissenting voice was raised. When it came to a showdown there was no cringing among the masses. And that was the Utah spirit shown in camp, on the front and at home all through the war.
CHAPTER VI

Spirit of the American People

The American people were reluctant about entering a war in which they had no obvious concern. From the beginning it appeared to be a struggle between greedy European powers for economic or political advantage. Our historical policy of avoiding foreign entanglements was the cornerstone of strict neutrality. An overwhelming majority of the people were emphatically opposed to war, especially on alien soil. The President was essentially a man of peace who believed in arbitration of all honest differences between men or nations. He doubtless hoped to be called as referee in this disturbance and to adjudicate the points at issue to the satisfaction of mankind as the crowning glory of his public career. None of his appointees to foreign posts was able to convince him that domination of the world and destruction of human liberty were the aims of imperialism. The presence of despotic Russia among the entente powers seemed to refute that assumption.

It took overt acts of hostility, such as the sinking of unarmed ships by submarines, the moving of Hindenberg's dead-line to our shores, the brazen duplicity of German statesmen and the outrageous abuse of national hospitality by the Kaiser's ambassadors, to thoroughly awaken suspicion as to the real significance of imperial insolence and aggressiveness. Even then the President called on Congress in vain for appropriations to establish a purely defensive policy of "armed neutrality", in order to equip our merchant and passenger ships for their own protection. The American people were prosperous and peace-loving, propagandists were abroad in the land, Germany was apologetic and the cloven hoof had left no discernible footprints on our shores during the first two years of the war.

Although the entente powers were in desperate straits and the English, in particular, were impatient at our delay in rushing to their aid, there were statesmen who understood our traditional attitude. On the 12th of April, 1917,
HON. L. H. FARNSWORTH
CHAIRMAN OF THE STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE FOR UTAH
Hon. Lloyd George, the British Prime Minister, saluting us as "comrades in arms", said:

"Recalling the wars of the past I am not surprised that America took its time to make up its mind about the character of this struggle. In Europe most of the great wars of the past were waged for dynastic aggrandizement and conquest. The United States of America have the noble tradition, never broken, of having never engaged in war except for liberty. The fact that the United States has reached its decision makes it abundantly clear to the rest of the world that this is a great fight for human liberty."

In an address delivered by Former President, now Chief Justice, William Howard Taft, on the 13th of June, 1917, he said:

"The self-restraint, the deliberation, the tolerance, which characterized our policy has had this great and good effect. It has shown to the world, and it has shown to our people, that in entering this war we have done it with the utmost reluctance and that our action is entirely void of offense. It has shown that we have been forced in because of a situation that no nation which appreciates what a government is formed for, could avoid doing what we are doing when the rights of our citizens, the preservation of which is the chief object of government, have been defiantly violated by a power that rests for its right upon might."

After the declaration of war was made there were many pacifists and conscientious objectors, a considerable number of spies and a sprinkling of slackers, but the response was ninety five per cent loyal. Americans of German birth or parentage, who had sympathized with the fatherland as against other powers, rallied to the standard of the land of their adoption, as thousands of names in the casualty lists attested. A major of the Motor Transportation Corps, writing home from France, said that his driver's name was Hemerighausen, whom he rechristened "Mike," and his dispatcher was Daunenhauer, whom he called "Pat," and added that there were many such names borne by "mighty good Americans."

From every walk in life, from every section of the country, volunteers tendered their services and offered to act in any capacity, with or without pay. They organized to conserve food and other supplies without awaiting requests or plans. In six weeks after the declaration universal conscription was announced. It had taken Great Britain three years to reach a point where subordination of the right of the individual to the needs of the state could be made effective. On the 5th of June, 1917, without exhortation, or hysterical appeals, or artificial enthusiasm, over 10,000,000 placed themselves at the disposal of this government. In the face of skeptics, spies, conspirators and demagogues, in answer to the sneers and veiled threats of imperialism, in defiance of German submarines and Russian quitters, 10,000,000 Americans of military age registered in one day, and 24,234,021 altogether.

To make the selective conscription act effective an executive officer was named for each state, with certain assistants, all of whom were commissioned in the federal army. Captain F. V. Fitzgerald, who had been Governor Bamberger's secretary, was selected for Utah. Local draft boards were created throughout the state and an appeal board was announced for the Utah district consisting of Parley L. Williams, Lafayette Hanchett, R. S. Collett, R. S. Joyce, J. H. Lamont and A. N. McKay. Mr. Hanchett resigned when called east as a "dollar a year" man. The total number of registrations, according to Captain Gordon Snow, who succeeded Captain Fitzgerald when the latter entered active service, was 103,052. Less than 15 per cent were found to be physically disqualified, but about 70 per-cent were rejected, exempted or passed to deferred classifications. Many who were excusable under the rules insisted on qualifying, but some eligibles sought safety in civilian work.

Without a thought of conquest, indemnity or material reward, without an impulse except to serve mankind and remove a menace to civilization, the United States entered a war which was consuming men by millions and treasure by billions. The spirit of the American people was shown in the earnestness and alacrity with which they answered every call. It was a matter of pride at home and of wonder abroad. No country, not invaded, ever made such a record for defense. No people, unmoved by greed of conquest, ever rushed into distant dangers so willingly. No age of the world ever witnessed such an unselfish outpouring of money and manhood for the defense of a principle. It was the spirit of the crusaders magnified and modernized.

While the coming of Lafayette in the dark days of our struggle for independence was analogous in some respects, his action lacked the open approval of his government whose covert aid was prompted by the wish to embarrass an enemy. But we never forgot Lafayette or what he did for the cause of liberty. Every generation of school children has been taught to revere his memory and recite his praises. France was our friend in need and Lafayette’s permanent place is assured among our cherished heroes in the hall of fame. One of the most dramatic incidents of our participation in the World War was when a distinguished American general, unaccustomed to speech making, after standing with his staff by the tomb of the great Frenchman during a moment of reverent silence, raised his hand, saluted and said:

“Lafayette, we are here”.

CHAPTER VII
America’s Contributions to the Cause

German writers and statesmen affected indifference over the declaration of war by the United States, and yet President Wilson was unmercifully castigated by the German press. The Berlin “Lokal-Anzeiger” said it was “inconceivable that Wilson could believe Germany responsible for beginning the war”. The Berlin “Vossische Zeitung” raved at “the President’s hypocritical efforts to dissociate the German government from the people”. The Hamberger “Fremdenblatt” described him as “a liar and blasphemer who was plunging his people into war”. The “Hannoverische Courier” called him “a wolf in sheep’s clothing of peace”. The “Kreuz Zeitung” said it would be disappointed “if the German-Americans with all their wealth and influence failed to have Wilson rebuked.”

One official organ declared that our action was only a “bluff,” as the war would be over long before we could land our first troops in Europe. Another assured its readers that “no harm could be expected from the American army which was not strong enough to defeat even Mexico.” German newspapers deceived none but their own people concerning our motives and intentions, nor them for long. Airships were soon flying over the lines dropping millions of copies of the President’s address, printed in German and emphasizing the portions deleted by the Kaiser’s censorship.

Before Congress gave its assent and support the President began preparations for what he hoped to avert but feared would come. The National Guard of thirty-two states had been called out or retained in service after a practice mobilization ostensibly to guard the Mexican border against bandits believed to be on Zimmerman’s pay roll. These organizations totaled about 52,000 men. On the day war was declared there were 65,777 men in the navy. There were only 107,641 regular soldiers. From this small beginning “the United States at one bound and in one year became a world power” with a determination which blasted the hopes of autocracy and forced the war to a speedy and successful conclusion.

Government reports show that 24,234,021 men were registered for military duty under the selective service act. Between April 6, 1917, and November 11, 1918, over 4,000,000 men served in the United States Army. Including the Navy and Marine corps and other branches of actual service the total number enlisted in the armed forces equipped by this republic was 4,800,000. The essential work of making munitions, running railways and building ships was performed by men not included in the military organization of the nation.

Comparative figures are interesting and instructive, but the higher physical standards imposed in this country, the auxiliary work accomplished here by noncombatant volunteers, for which purpose men were drafted and enrolled in other lands, make it almost impossible to compare the fighting strength of the several armies. As English methods are somewhat similar to our own a comparison of the two expeditionary forces is possible. It took England three years to cross the channel with 2,000,000 men. The United States, with the Atlantic to navigate, accomplished more in half the time.

The havoc wrought by German submarines and the boast of German leaders that our transports would never be allowed to cross the ocean aroused greater apprehensions than all the other risks of war. Yet hundreds of ship-loads of American soldiers were carried to France, transportation beginning soon after the declaration of war. From 50,000 per month the number increased to 300,000 per month as ships became available. Not a transport convoyed by American battle ships was lost.

It is estimated that two out of every three American soldiers who reached France took part in battle. The actual number sent over was 2,084,000 of whom 1,390,000 saw active service on the front. Our expeditionary forces were organized into forty two divisions, each with 28,000 men and the necessary officers. There were also supplementary artillery, aviation, engineering and supply troops numbering approximately 800,000 men. American combat divisions were in battle for 200 days, from the 25th of April, 1918, until the signing of the armistice. During this period they were engaged in thirteen major operations, of which eleven were joint undertakings with the French, British or Italians, and two were distinctively American. In the month preceding the armistice American troops held one hundred and one miles of the front, or twenty three per cent of the entire battle line.

Aviation was a new branch of military service. Our aviators soared above enemy encampments, counted the cannon, estimated the troops, photographed positions, dropped bombs and directed the fire of the artillery. At our entrance into the war we had fifty-five training airplanes, of which fifty-one were of obsolete patterns and four were old fashioned. During the course of the war we produced 8,000 training planes and 16,000 engines for such craft. We made and shipped 4,435 twelve-cylinder Liberty planes to our expeditionary forces and delivered 1,025 to the Allies. We built 3,227 DeHavilands and sent 1,885 of them over-seas. American aviators brought down 755 enemy planes and lost 357.

We sent 7,500,000 tons of supplies to France and distributed them in American trucks. We built ships by the score, at the rate of 6,759,000 tons a year. In the first fiscal year 1,622 new ships were constructed. Four ships aggregating 48,000 tons were launched at one yard in one day. The Defiance, a 12,000 ton ship, was built in a month. All records were broken. Although not a ship-building country, we soon had one hundred and fifty-nine ship yards and eight hundred and nineteen ship-ways in full blast. Of the yards seventy-two were for steel, eighty for wooden and three for composite hulls. Besides all these there were tugs and barges built, and yachts and lake craft remodeled, and interned vessels put into commission. On July 1st, 1917, there were 40,000 men at work in ship building plants; on July 1st, 1918, we had 300,000 men in the yards and 250,000 men building for Allied trade. The "Utacarbon", named in honor of the state and the record county in the Liberty Loan drives, was launched at the Alameda shipyards in the presence of the Governor and many spectators from Utah.

Activity in this line was imperative, not only for the transportation of troops but to replace the immense losses in provision-carrying fleets which had occurred during the early stages of the war. The shipment of food promised to be a deciding factor in the outcome. There had been heavy losses, but the number of men still engaged at the front was very large. The comparative strength of the several armed forces under fighting orders in Europe, as originally equipped by their respective governments, has been estimated as follows:

<table>

To this may be added the 9,000,000 Russians who entered the war, the survivors of whom withdrew after concluding a separate peace with Germany in 1917.

Our Civil War was long regarded as one of the greatest conflicts of modern times. At no time did the number of men under arms exceed 1,300,000, while those who were killed in battle or died of wounds during the four years totaled 110,000 on the Northern side and 80,000 on the Southern side. In four years of the World War 40,000,000 men were under arms of whom 7,354,000 were killed in battle or died of wounds, while three millions more died of disease contracted while in the service.

One of the most gruesome and revolting features of the World War is found in the following table of civilians slaughtered, as estimated by the several relief commissions, although the victims of Turkish massacres in Armenia, Syria and Macedonia are believed to be almost double the figures given:

These people were not killed in battle, being noncom-batants, unarmed and practically helpless when attacked.
The totals include women who were mistreated and slain,
and children who were neglected and abused until death came to their relief. Such atrocious disregard of the recognized customs of civilized warfare aroused the wrath of humanity, massed the rest of the world against the Central Powers, provoked the entrance of the United States and lost the war to the Turko-Teutonic alliance.
CHAPTER VIII

Financing the World War

Although national preparedness had long been a topic of academic discussion in Congress and elsewhere, few Americans were able to foresee any contingency which prompted immediate action. We had been drifting along in our tranquil way without scanning the sky for indications of a storm. If we heard the distant rumblings we dismissed all apprehensions with an optimistic conviction that it was a local cloudburst in the Balkans, or elsewhere, and never provided ourselves with galoshes or umbrellas. When the war cloud eventually threw its black shadow across the land and we felt the first few drops of moisture fall, we found ourselves lacking in almost every contrivance men or nations need for protection. We had plenty of means and pluck and patriotism, but military equipment was meagre and factories adapted to its creation were few and small.

Our moral responsibilities had outgrown a cherished isolation. In our policy of nationalism we had not taken into account the wireless telegraph, the submarines, the flying machines and the swiftly moving ships that discount distance and erase the dim lines drawn by treaty makers. We had overstepped a continent and stood in a world, but we did not realize it. So we had to raise money as rapidly as it could be used to advantage. The federal government authorized a series of loans apportioned among the states according to population and wealth. When the first subscription closed on the 15th day of June, 1917, it was found that 4,000,000 people had purchased bonds, 3,960,000 having subscribed for amounts ranging from $50 to $10,000. No more conclusive demonstration of faith in a government and belief in its cause was ever made by a free people. The subscribers to England’s first bond sale in the same war numbered only 100,000 persons, and the first loan made by Germany was taken up by only 1,117,444 buyers. The transaction was as notable as was the response to the first call for men. It was remarkable, not only for the immense sum raised, but for the popular character of the subscription. It had been the experience of European financiers, and was the expectation of American bankers, that seventy per cent of the amount called for would have to be put up by capitalists. Truly it was a war by the people for the people. Altogether five bond sales were authorized and every one was oversubscribed. The fifth was even more popular than the first and numbered over 12,000,000 subscribers. The loans were as follows:

This immense sum was cheerfully produced and advanced for the federal government to finance the war. Out of this amount, ships were built on both coasts, clothing was supplied from the factories of New England, corn and wheat from the middle West, munitions from the East and South, and a considerable portion of these billions was expended in those regions which were prepared, by reason of markets, shipping facilities and established factories, to supply the needs of the government with the least possible delay.

With a spirit of sacrifice, born of patriotism and unmarked by a single hope of material benefit, with a resignation which gave no thought to selfish gain or local glory, Utah did her part in the great war to the last man called and the last dollar required of her. Other states undoubtedly subscribed, or donated, with the same proportionate generosity, inspired by the highest motives of fealty, or benevolence, but Utah had no shipyards, nor motor factories, nor munition plants, nor timber to sell contractors, nor ports of embarkation, nor short hauls for produce, nor princely payrolls, nor profiteers. She had no surplus goods, nor shiploads of supplies, nor any products in quantities to bring returns commensurate with her contributions. Everything she could afford to give or lend or send or relinquish went out from her borders, and she was duly solaced and truly thankful when she got back some of her boys.

Every time a bond sale was conducted, or a drive made for the numerous auxiliaries of the fighting force, Utah went over the top. Here are her subscriptions to the several loans:

While no safer investment could be made than money advanced on government bonds, the removal of more than seventy millions of dollars from a region in process of development, with practically none of it to be expended here, was keenly felt, but nobody heard a whimper. After all, these were loans and time would restore the amount to circulation. There were considerable sums, however, which were simply donated to the cause, without hope of reimbursement. And these, too, were oversubscribed. A partial list, by way of illustration, follows:

Besides these contributions to worthy causes and sums advanced on bonds, the people of Utah purchased $5,614,540 worth of War Savings Stamps. Altogether the outlay averaged about one hundred and ninety dollars for every man, woman and child in the state. It is believed that nine-tenths of the people of Utah contributed money to the prosecution of the war, and that three-fourths of them took some sort of personal part in the work of preparation.

Too much praise cannot be given the banks of Utah for their zeal and accommodation in putting these loans across. They subscribed liberally and assisted hundreds of individuals to carry their subscriptions, while their officers were active in every line of war work. They deserve credit for they certainly gave it, in many instances when patriotism was the only security.

In making the drives for the several bond sales the personal influence and energy of the individuals in charge were potent factors. Those officially connected with the state-wide movement were: Heber J. Grant, Clarence Bamberger, Lester D. Freed, Mrs. W. M. Ferry, Mrs. W. F. Adams, W. R. Putnam, W. W. Armstrong, C. W. Whitley, W. R. Wallace, F. C. Richmond, L. H. Farnsworth, George Albert Smith, James Pingree, W. H. Wattis, M. S. Browning, F. S. Murphy, and J. S. Critchlow. There were efficient workers in every town of importance, and results proved that an intelligent campaign preceded each drive.
CHAPTER IX

Magnitude of Our Preparations

If the promptitude and magnitude of our preparations for war astonished the impatient allies, it must have made a pronounced impression on the enemy which, through spies and sympathizers, kept fully informed of all that was going on in this country. Lord Northcliffe, the great English journalist, owner of many newspapers and one of the world's keenest observers, while visiting Washington about three months after our debut as a world power, said:

"Am I dreaming? The United States government declared war on the 6th of April, authorized a loan of eleven and a half billions of dollars and levied a tax to raise two and a half billions more in addition to ordinary revenues; appropriated nine billions for ships, six hundred and forty millions for aeroplanes and for other stupendous authorizations, including credits to the Allies of seven billions, making a total of twenty one billions; gave power to commandeer plants, ships and materials; provided for conscription in advance of England and Canada; registered ten and a half millions of men; sent Pershing with troops to France and naval vessels to European waters; put food control and food production measures in operation; all in three months. Am I dreaming?"

Later on European newspapers sent correspondents to cover the area of our activities in France. The special representative of the London Daily Express furnished the readers of his paper with the following information gleaned in a week's tour along the lines of communication: After landing at a massive dock built by American labor out of American materials, transported by American ships constructed after entering the conflict, he traveled on American railways, behind American locomotives in France, sent telegrams over American lines to various points, talked to Paris on American telephones served by operators from the United States, bought American goods at American stores, shipped them home by American express, and saw military supplies distributed by American trucks as he motored along the lines in American automobiles. "On a railway journey of 100 miles," he wrote, "I was never for more than a half hour out of sight of American camps."

Aside from the canvas camps and remodeled quarters in French villages there were American towns and stations of wood and metal. Train loads of canned goods and other provisions were stored at twenty substantial bases, and five companies of American bakers were sending bread to the troops every day. Meats brought from the United States, handled by American workmen and loaded on American freight cars, were hauled across France by American crews to the different supply stations and put in American cold storage. On a single dock the observer saw four thousand laborers at work under American direction and expense, while there were harbors, waterworks, gas plants, machinery shops, munition factories and track yards, all American, and built on a scale which he described as "simply stupendous."

During our participation in the war the expenses of the United States were as follows:

These figures give some idea of the magnitude of our undertaking. Haste and wholesale preparations were of vital importance. Delay involved a loss of more than money. Haggling over costs and deliberating over plans were considered crimes. Mistakes were made, of course, plenty of them; and delays occurred, for every statesman had his plan and his hearing, which is one weakness of a republic in war time. But we soon got busy.

In preparing for a long war we were cutting it short. Our most effective assault, the one which hastened the end and forced capitulation, was the impetuous charge of American energy. The decisive battle of the war was undoubtedly won by the showing made to back our troops more than by any military demonstration of itself. And in time the people will come to see and understand that all this outlay, that the immense equipment which seemed unnecessary after the sudden collapse of the Central Powers, that the extravagance ever incident to quick and colossal preparations for unaccustomed tasks, that the attendant expense and debt incurred, produced results which broke the spirit of the German leaders and saved millions of human lives by bringing the bloodiest conflict of history to a speedy conclusion.
CHAPTER X

American Soldiers in Action

Following the declaration of war by the United States on the 6th of April, 1917, came this cry from Britain: “Help us against the submarines.” These Apaches of the sea, lying in ambush beneath the waves, caused the death of 28,000 unoffending noncombatants, besides destroying 18,000,000 gross tons of British shipping, including a half million tons of war ships. America answered this appeal with the immediate dispatch of a fleet of destroyers to British waters. From France came this pathetic plea: “Send some troops at once; we are badly shattered; our people will fight to the end but they fight in despair; though you can send but a few send them before it is too late for we need the stimulus of their presence.” General Pershing took the answer in person, landing in France on the 15th of June, followed shortly by 25,000 regulars. The gauntlet of the seas had been safely run and the first installment of our debt to France was paid.

Upon their arrival in France the American troops received a royal welcome, but the greeting crowds were composed largely of disabled veterans, very old men and women, and children too young to be at the front or at work in the munition plants. The cheers were psalms of thanksgiving and the smiles were those that come from burdened hearts. Many were refugees from northern towns and cities. All had drained the cup of bitterness and had sacrificed to the god of war. When our first soldiers reached the scene in the middle of the fateful year of 1917 the fortunes of the Allies were at their lowest ebb. Over western and southeastern Europe the gloom of discouragement had settled like a pall. Belgium was in ashes, Rumania in agony, Serbia slowly dying and Armenia struggling in the arms of the unspeakable Turk. France stalked among her ruins like a spectre, bled white, but grimly fighting on the brink of her last ditch. In the extremity of exhaustion, but still defiant, stood the British whose pluck and plight were voiced by General Haig
April 12, 1917, in the famous appeal to his army: "There is no other course open to us but to fight it out—every position must be held to the last man—there must be no retirement. With our backs to the wall, believing in the justice of our cause, each of us must fight to the end."

Then, when everything depended on endurance, when both sides were tense, expectant and waiting for something to snap, came the most appalling tragedy of the war—the military breakdown of Russia, which had mobilized the largest army enrolled on either side. But the continuous slaughter of Russian soldiers who were repeatedly led into prepared traps, apparently through the intrigue of German agents and sympathizers, of whom the Czarina seemed to be chief, finally convinced the slow-thinking Russians that they were being sacrificed intentionally. After losing 7,500,000 men in killed and wounded, and 2,500,000 prisoners, the people revolted, deposed their leaders in 1917, and began clamoring for peace. Without recognized leadership, they bartered honor and glory for drunkenness and plunder. Just as the Italians, after a brilliant campaign in the east, were almost ready to effect a long planned conjunction with the forces of the north, Russia deserted her Allies and betrayed their cause, her armies vanished, her munitions were auctioned to the enemy and the whole aspect of the war was changed.

No longer concerned over the northern front Germany transferred her released divisions to the west. German propagandists were sent to Italy to repeat what had been done in Russia. Deceived by false promises and misrepresentations set forth in newspapers printed in Italian on German presses, the army which had driven the Austrians across the Isonzo abandoned the fields it had won, left 200,000 prisoners in the hands of the enemy, threw down its guns and skurried for home. But the Italian government stood firm, reorganized its army under General Diaz as commander-in-chief, and eventually emerged from the cloud to redeem at Piave the disgrace of Caporetto. Yet, coming at such a critical moment, the defection of two strong armies seemed a blow to the Allies from which recovery was doubtful.

Out of the night came the gleam of dawn. The stars and stripes were hoisted in France. Hope revived as the lie was given to the boast of autocracy that we couldn't get ready inside of three years and couldn't land a thousand men in France anyhow. Before the close of the year American troops had taken an active part in the second battle of Verdun. Three companies of American engineers, surprised at their work in a railway construction camp, were included in the German assault upon Cambrai. With picks and pistols, crowbars and shovels, they entered the fray and gave a good account of themselves. Six months after Pershing reached the continent, American troops were in charge of an important sector in the bloody region between Toul and Verdun. Shoulder to shoulder with French and British comrades the Americans made their presence felt at Armentiers and Seicheprey. In January, 1918, the American flag was raised in Lorraine to remain to the end of hostilities.

It is not the scope or purpose of this volume to follow our troops through every engagement or to present a detailed account of their activities. They did their part wherever assigned and won the highest praise from the allied commanders. They were shelled and gassed and bombed and assaulted. They fought at Somme, Lys and Aisne in April. They drove the enemy from Cantigny at the point of the bayonet. At Chateau-Thierry the Marines wrote history in words of fire. In his book entitled “With the Help of God and a Few Marines”, Gen. Catlin describes the opening engagement on May 31st:

“Under a galling fire the Marines brought up their guns and organized their defenses with mathematical precision. Then came the Germans, a long, gray flood of them, streaming down to the bridges. The Americans opened a fire so furious and accurate that the advancing columns hesitated, wavered and then halted behind the barrier of their fallen comrades. Then they charged. On the bridges and streets there waged a wild, demoniacal tempest of machine gun fire and rifle fire. The enemy was infuriated at this resistance and fought desperately to brush the Yankees aside. Marines fell by dozens beside their guns but there were others who leaped into the breach and kept the stream of bullets pouring until they cleared the bridges of the enemy.”

Day after day the Americans were compelled to defend their advantage but they never relinquished it. In July came the acid test of Marine metal. At the battle of Belleau Wood they made six attacks, captured the coveted position, and repelled nine counter attacks. Eventually the Germans were forced to swim the Marne and many were drowned or captured. An American general, whose name was not given for obvious reasons, politely refused to obey a dilatory order of the French officer in command and persisted in a furious counter attack near Chateau-Thierry which brought victory. "It was here," according to General Pershing, "that a regiment wrote in blood one of the most brilliant pages in American military history." This regiment of the Third Division, in which there were about two hundred Utah boys, was commanded by Col. Ulysses G. MacAlexander, baptized in fire as "The Rock of the Marne," now stationed at Fort Douglas and honored as a resident of Utah at the time of this publication.

The World War volume of Ridpath's Universal History says of this battle of the Marne: "One gallant regiment—the Thirty-eighth regulars, under Colonel MacAlexander, won immortal glory by holding its position though surrounded on three sides. Its riflemen and machine gunners practically annihilated the Sixth German Grenadier regiment and took four hundred prisoners."

In contrast with many contemptuous references of the German staff to our fighting men, let us consider the following excerpts from the official report of Lieut. Kurt Hesse, of the imperial army, who was in the fight and gained his impressions from actual contact: "Descending the northern slopes of the Marne I never saw so many dead nor such frightful sights in battle. The Americans on the other shore had completely shot away two of our companies. They waited until we were within fifty feet and mowed us down. This foe has nerves, one must allow him this boast, but he also has brutality. A cry of horror ran through our lines that 'the Americans kill everything they shoot at.' We may talk sarcastically about American bluff, but more than sixty per cent of our dead and wounded in this battle may be charged to this enemy."

During the second battle of the Marne the Americans comprised thirty per cent of all the troops engaged. Side by side with their French and British allies, the Americans followed the retreating German army step by step, fighting almost constantly. On the 8th of October, the day that Lundendorff was compelled to recross Flanders fields, the Prussian Guard was confronted at St. Etienne by American Indians, representing thirteen tribes. With them were Texas and Oklahoma rangers. These sharpshooters crept as closely as possible to the cement hives which concealed the machine gums of the enemy, located the peepholes and shot out the eyes of the gunners. At the close of the fight the pride of the Kaiser's army could not be seen for the dust of departure, throwing away guns, knapsacks, canteens and blankets, sacrificing every thing to speed. They believed in the survival of the fleetest.

Between the 1st and 11th of November, 1918, a final assault was made along the entire line from Alsace to the Enlish Channel. There were Britons, French, Belgians and Americans on the left, French and British colonials in the center, and Americans and French on the right. Gradually the enemy was forced back to the boundary. On the 6th of November the Americans had recovered Sedan and had completely severed the German supply line, without which the enemy was helpless. Then the Crown Prince made his exit and the Central Powers reopened headquarters on German soil. Northern France was cleared of the enemy, Belgium was ransomed and the German authorities were suing for peace.

That American correspondents had a good word to say about our soldiers upon occasion was expected; that the impulsive French gave them due credit was in keeping with their natural attitude and disposition; but when the cold, critical and rather captious Briton praised "the raw recruits from America" it will be understood that he was "completely bowled over." Referring to the "Wild Cat Division" from the mountain districts of Tennessee and Carolina, which smashed the Hindenburg line on the Scheldt, an English journalist said: "Those young Americans came into their first big battle full of courage and impetuous desire. Leading the advance they broke the strongest defenses of the Hindenburg line, stormed their way across the canal to the machine guns on the other bank, and went forward like huntsmen in a chase that must never be forgotten. In one of the greatest battles of the war, when we crossed the Scheldt canal, it was these Americans who stormed one of the most formidable sectors of the line and overpowered the enemy."

Gallantry in action drew to our army the attention and respect of both allies and enemies. Deeds of individual daring surrounded Americans with the glamor of supermen.
The reckless deeds of Sergeant Woodfill will be recounted at European firesides for years to come. The exploit of Corporal York, of Tennessee, conscientious objector and reluc-tart soldier, who became so inflamed over the barbarities of the enemy that he attacked three German machine gun nests single-handed, silenced them and captured thirty men, will not be soon forgotten. At another time it is related that, with a detail of seven men, he put thirty-six of these hives out of commission, killed twenty of the enemy and captured one hundred and thirty-two others. The pluck of Private Sam Joseph, of Kentucky, who went over the top time and again, received more than one hundred wounds from muskets, machine guns, shells and shrapnel, but kept on until a bursting shell at Argonne sent him to the hospital for the balance of his term of enlistment, was an illustration of the grit of a "common soldier."

No native bred determination could exceed the nerve and loyalty of an adopted son, Private Shimanski, "who entered a cellar to install a telephone, where he was ambushed by eleven of the enemy, of whom he killed two and took nine prisoners single-handed." Nor can we overlook the valor of Private Theodore F. Lee, of Ibapah, Utah, who, to quote the citation, "with a comrade charged an emplacement, killing part of the crew and routing the others, captured three heavy machine guns and a light Maxim, which they turned on the retreating enemy." These were a few incidents of the war which inspired the Allies with confidence and convinced the enemy that Americans were able to make good their "bluff."

In the closing weeks of the war American flyers were beginning to attract favorable attention from the veteran airmen. They had been trained at home fields or sent to French schools at Issoudun, at Chateaux-Roux, and other points. Flying camps were established at Columbey les Belles, at Beaumont and Romorantin. American planes were being "ferried" from Orly shops to the various battle fronts, and American pilots and observers were doing effective work. During the war they brought down 755 enemy planes, while their losses were but 357. Among the leading aces were Major James A. Meissner, Captain Eddie V. Rickenbacker, Lieut. Douglas Campbell and many others. A Logan boy, Russell L. Maughan, first lieutenant in the One Hundred Thirty-ninth aero squadron, was awarded the distinguished service cross for extraordinary heroism in action near Sommernance, France, October 27, 1918. "Accompanied by two other planes, Lieutenant Maughan was patrolling our lines when he saw below him an enemy plane. When he started to attack, the enemy kept coming until there were seven hostile planes around him, but he succeeded in bringing his first adversary to the ground, and in crippling another just before reaching the American lines." Lieutenant LaMar Nelson, secretary to Governor Mabey, brought down a balloon at St. Mihiel and a battle plane later, winning the war cross and a medal for distinguished service. American airmen participated in raids over Metz, Cologne, Stuttgart, Mannheim and other enemy strongholds.

Dr. Robert R. Hampton, of Salt Lake City, who had the distinction of being the first flight surgeon of the American Army, was stationed at Issoudun, the great aviation center of France, for the purpose of noting the effects of flying on the men of the air service, and restraining those whose ambitions endangered their health. "The American aviators are the best in the world," he said, and added that this opinion was shared by men of all countries who had an opportunity to observe the work of the boys at Issoudun.

Tanks were used to a great advantage by the Americans. These engines of destruction had been discounted by some German generals, although others attributed their ultimate defeat to the irresistible onslaught of tanks. They convoyed advancing troops when heavier artillery had to be left behind. Entering a town where the Germans were making a stand, one of these huge tanks would back off and charge until its weight and momentum crushed a building, which it would then proceed to flatten out, with all the contents, including guns and gunners. The Frankfurter Zeitung declared that "our losses around St. Mihiel were due to the extensive use by the enemy of tanks."

The success of our troops depended, to an appreciable extent, upon the speed and efficiency of the trucks which formed an endless chain of supply trains and kept the fighting line in food and ammunition. Every hour of the day and night they were going and coming under fire and in constant danger of air raiders who singled them out for special attention.

Our medical staff was tireless and efficient. The fatalities among surgeons and hospital attendants, who were never immune from attack, although they treated the foe with the same care and skill as they gave our own wounded, were greater in proportion to their numbers than in any other branch of the ground service. In the battle of the Somme alone six hundred doctors of the allied forces were killed.

In whatever capacity they served, whether as soldiers or sailors, as airmen or surgeons, as truckmen or tankmen, as engineers or mechanics, with infantry or artillery, in the air or in the trenches, on sea or land, the enlisted men of this Republic distinguished themselves in the World War as worthy of the best traditions of our army and navy.
CHAPTER XI

The Wild Western Division

The Ninety-first Division, under Gen. William H. Johnston, known as the "Wild West Division," was composed of men from Utah, Idaho, Montana, Washington, Oregon, Alaska and northern California. They were concentrated at Camp Lewis, an ideal location on American Lake, in the state of Washington. All Utah men inducted into the service through selective enrollment were sent to this camp for training. From time to time detachments were drawn from the several regiments stationed there and sent to France to restore companies which had been wiped out in action.

More Utah men happened to be assigned to the 362nd Infantry than to any of the others, so it came to be regarded as a Utah regiment. The chaplain of this organization was Calvin S. Smith, a Utah boy and son of the late President of the Church of Latter Day Saints. There was no more popular man in the division than the chaplain, who never considered personal risk when he could serve his comrades. He was wounded in action and cited for distinguished conduct under fire.

The division landed in France on the 22nd of July, 1918, thoroughly drilled and seasoned for active participation in the conflict. While the four artillery regiments of the Ninety-first did not fare much better than the National Guard unit of Utah, the infantry, engineering and auxiliary units soon got into the thick of the fighting. They were divided up among various commands and assigned to barracks that had none of the comforts or beauties of Camp Lewis. At Chau- mont and other places where quartered, they had to put up with any shelters available and learned to accustom themselves to the rigors and inconveniences of the battle camps. There was plenty of staple food, but few tables on which to eat, and no fancy dishes. They had constant drills in the use of gas masks, guns and grenades and took long hikes over the hills and through the marshes.
In September, this division was attached to the First American Army, and marched from Condrecourt to Sorcy-sur-Meuse, to be ready for the St. Mihiel drive. While awaiting orders, the Wild Westerners were bombed by German airmen, but the casualties were few. From St. Mihiel they were unexpectedly ordered to the Argonne-Meuse sector, and made forced marches by night, getting what rest they could without beds or barracks. They were to attack tried German troops in a locality where the enemy had every advantage, while the Allied veterans were anxious to see what these raw Americans would do under intense punishment. After midnight the American heavy guns began their barrage, which continued until dawn. Then the infantry went forward with a rush which gradually slowed down because of heavy fire and barbed wire entanglements. Men fell by the score, but their comrades kept on until they reached the German trenches, to find the enemy dead or flying. The new troops had stood the test and captured their objective.

Next, the men of the Ninety-first were sent into the Cheppy Woods to clean up a number of troublesome machine gun nests. Here they were again successful, and for eight days fought ceaselessly and valiently, never losing a foot of ground once gained. They drove the Germans from Gesnes, took the Caiman and Crocodile trenches, and weathered the terrific shell fire poured on them from Montfaucon. While they paid a heavy price in casualties, they captured 2360 prisoners and 400 machine guns and a few pieces of heavy cannon. On the 4th of October they were ordered back for recuperation. Replacements soon restored the numerical strength of the division, and on the 17th of October it was sent from Revigny into Belgium to assist the "Army of Liberation." As a part of General Degoutte's command, under King Albert, the division saw continuous service until the close of the war. The commanding officer, General William H. Johnston, was complimented by General Pershing on the behavior of his men in the Argonne-Meuse offensive and decorated with a distinguished service medal for "the skill and courage of the Ninety-first division in the difficult advance that resulted in the taking of Epinonville and Ivoiry, and later in the attack on and capture of the important city of Audenarde in the closing operations of the war in Belgium." This citation included every Utah soldier in the division, who were all highly complimented, with their comrades from other western states, for "exceptional courage in the face of a desperate resistance from overwhelming odds."

On the last day of October the Wild Western Division began to cut its way through the Spitalls-Boschen woods, out of which they drove the Germans across the Scheldt, when they took the town of Audenarde and prodded the enemy along for thirteen gory kilometers. American engineers, under fire, threw pontoon crossings over the big canal, prepared dugouts and trenches against reverses and got everything ready for an offensive campaign, when the armistice spoiled the fun. The end of the war found the Ninety-first in Belgium, where, with the colors of the Belgian and British armies, floated the victorious western colors, which are now in the State Capitol at Salt Lake City, in charge of Adjutant General W. G. Williams and the Utah National Guard. The artillery regiments of the Ninety-first were assigned to duty as part of the Army of Occupation stationed on the Rhine after the war.

On the 11th of December, 1918, General Degoutte issued an official statement in which he paid high tribute to the American troops, and said: "In addressing the division of the United States Army which covered itself with glory in the Chateau-Thierry offensive, I said that orders were always accomplished irrespective of the difficulties arising or the sacrifices to be made. I have found the same spirit of duty and discipline in the 37th and 91st divisions, which makes valiant soldiers and victorious armies. Glory to such troops and such commanders! They have bravely contributed to the liberation of Belgium and to final victory. The great nation to which they belong can be proud of them." This was signed by the Commanding General of the Belgian Army.

The casualty list indicates the severity of the test put upon these westerners, and the honors bestowed show how they stood that test. In killed, wounded and prisoners, out of a division of 28,172 men and officers, they lost 5,838. The survivors received five congressional medals of honor, three distinguished service medals, one hundred and fifty distinguished service crosses, one hundred and one croix de guerre and one hundred and fifty war crosses. They captured, in their brief period of activity, twelve officers, 2,400 soldiers, 471 machine guns and 33 pieces of field artillery.
After the division had disbanded, Major General Johnston wrote Governor Bamberger a letter full of praise for the Utah men who had been in his command. Among other things he said: “The people of Utah have reason to be proud of the record made by their representatives in the Ninety-first division. It has been a pleasure to command men of this kind. They have demonstrated that no better soldiers exist than can be made of young American citizens. They will return to their civil pursuits, not only with the experience gained as soldiers, but will return better citizens because of their service during the war. They have learned how to command and how to obey; how to bear with fortitude the unavoidable inconveniences and even sufferings of the campaign. I congratulate you upon the return of such men to the citizenship of your state, and with equal sincerity I part with them with genuine regret.”

Time was when the raw, unseasoned troops of the United States were held in contempt by tacticians of military powers, who were unable to understand how any country dared place reliance on a citizen army in the face of war. But surely, by this time, foreign experts have witnessed demonstrations enough to dispel all doubt of the efficacy of the American plan, even though they may not be able to comprehend the secret of it. With all due respect to our regular soldiers who are fighters by nature, trade and profession, who never have been defeated by equal numbers, it is nevertheless conceded that a pacific republic must depend largely upon its citizen soldiery for man power when it comes to an actual test of military strength. We have always found our volunteers, our militiamen and our conscripts equal to every demand made upon them. It was the dauntless spirit of our raw militia men that won two wars from a most valient foe in the days of our national adolescence and poverty. It was the spirit which followed Scott and Taylor in an unbroken chain of victories across Mexico. It was the same spirit which made the war between the sections a struggle to the death. It was the spirit which drove Spanish tyranny from the islands of two hemispheres. It was that same spirit which gave hope to the Allies and struck the enemy with despair in the World War.

American troops are trained and equipped for battle and not for show. They are educated not only to fight but to know what they are fighting for. When they enter the lists for freedom and justice, for themselves or for others, they are “thrice armed” and conscious of the sympathy and support of a united people behind them. They have this consolation also: No matter what happens they serve a grateful republic, one which provides a home for the infirm and disabled, which looks after the widows and orphans, which permanently marks, preserves and guards each soldier’s grave, on which every year a grateful people bestow floral tokens of love and honor.

With such a country to serve and such care guaranteed by tradition, with a firm belief that his government never engages in an unworthy cause, the American soldier feels capable of any undertaking or sacrifice required of him. This is the keynote of the American battle cry.
CHAPTER XII
American Battles and Generals

Two important battles of the great war were distinctively American—that of St. Mihiel and that of the Argonne. The former was fought in a sector established in 1914, from which the Germans and Austrians had never been dislodged. Their shelters were models of military strength and comfort, fully stocked and fortified for another winter of stubborn resistance. The Crown Prince, who was in command, expressed his gratification at being confronted by the unseasoned troops of America. In a statement published in German newspapers he said: "We speak openly of victory. We mean to hold our own and not allow ourselves to be vanquished. The French fight brilliantly but are bleeding to death. They do not hesitate at any sacrifice. With the English the individual is very good and tenacious, but the leadership is deficient. The Americans do not know what to do or what they are fighting for. The enemy must see that they will not be able to attain their aim."

The St. Mihiel salient on the Meuse, guarding the approach to Metz and standing as a constant menace to Paris and Verdun, was the object of Gen. Pershing's first wholly independent military operation. Two hundred thousand Americans attacked from the north and east. Both assaults were successful and the German army was caught in the jaws of a pincer that held some 20,000 of the enemy while the rest made a hurried retreat. Over four hundred heavy guns and large stores of supplies and material were taken, and September 2nd passed into history as a milestone on the ever shortening road to victory. It is known as "The Battle without a Flaw."

America's biggest battle was the storming of the Argonne, called "The Thermopylae of France." According to Gen. Pershing's report, here lay the strongest defenses of the enemy, guarding the chief gateway for supplies. It was frankly admitted that only fresh and vigorous troops could hope to take such a formidable sector. The attack began on the 26th of September and continued for twenty days. The Allies had not correctly estimated the importance of a victory here. They hoped to drive a wedge which would discommode the Germans through the winter and open the way for a spring drive. As a matter of fact the war was practically ended when the American Army took Argonne. The British were forcing the enemy to the border on the west, and the French, the Canadians and the Australians were recapturing town after town along the old Hindenberg line east of Amiens. Peace overtures began at once and capitulation followed within a month.

Gen. Pershing says that we had a million fighting men in this attack, but the German defenses were considered almost impregnable. The rest of our army was with Haig and Byng, between Cambrai and St. Quentin, along the Oise and Aisne. As the French, under General Gourand, started north towards Perthes, our army, directed by General Pershing, began its parallel advance on the intrenchments of Argonne. Every foot of ground was contested tenaciously by the Central Powers, whose leaders could see no way to repair the possible loss of this natural stronghold which they had protected with entanglements of barbed wire zigzagged for twenty-five miles among the trees, and were defending with every appliance known to ancient and modern warfare.

At the beginning Germany had counted with confidence on three elements of success in her favor. First, the advantage of surprise, which actually gave her a long list of opening victories. Second, the panic she hoped to create by a policy of terrorism, calculated to force the world to its knees. Third, the capacity for unremitting warfare, due to long preparation and perfect equipment. Something—the intervention of Providence or the desperation of man, or both—interfered with all these arrangements. Napoleon never opened a campaign with more to his advantage. But the Germans had not reckoned on the resistance of the Belgians or the unconquerable courage of the French. The campaign of frightfulness had an effect quite the reverse of what the Germans had foretold; it engendered anger rather than fear, and aroused a world that otherwise might have remained neutral. And when it came to sustained effort and morale, the German savants had failed to consider the tenacity of the British and the pluck and resourcefulness of the Americans.
According to Frederick Palmer, "Generals Liggett, Bullard, Harbord and Summerall were to Pershing what Sherman, Sheridan, Thomas and Hancock were to Grant, and what Jackson, Stuart and Longstreet were to Lee, in our Civil War."

But there were many officers of skill and genius in the American Army and Navy. Utah sent four Brigadier Generals into the war. General Edgar A. Wedgewood was not assigned to overseas duty, owing to physical disability resulting from a wound received in action during the Philippine campaign, when he was captain of Battery A of the Utah Artillery, which won signal distinction in the Spanish-American conflict. He died during the epidemic of influenza before the close of the war.

General Richard W. Young, one of Utah’s most beloved sons, was a graduate of West Point, a veteran of the Spanish-American War, a successful lawyer and a former chief justice in Manila. At the time of his death, which occurred about a year after his return from France following the close of the war, the Salt Lake Tribune editorially referred to him as "a national character whose death becomes a national loss," and described him as follows: "Modest and unassuming, gentle but unfaltering, courageous but never belligerant, with a Christian aversion to war and a natural diffidence towards military pomp, he nevertheless tendered his services whenever men were needed to uphold the flag, ever prompted by a strong sense of patriotism and by a conscience which placed at the disposal of his government an ability developed and trained in a national institution." His funeral was the largest and most imposing ever seen in Utah.

General Frank T. Hines, to whom was assigned the important task of directing the transportation of United States troops across the Atlantic, performed the arduous duties of this delicate and dangerous assignment in a way to earn the lasting gratitude of all the boys, their relatives and friends, and to win a distinguished service medal awarded later by the Secretary of War. He was also decorated with the badge of the Legion of Honor by the French Government. General Hines is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Hines of Salt Lake City, and began his military career as one of the sergeants in Battery B of the Utah Artillery, under Captain F. A. Grant, with whom he went through the Spanish-American War and the Philippine campaign. From that time he remained with the army winning one promotion after another until he attained his present high rank.

General William E. Cole, who likewise attracted favorable consideration in the last war, is a native of Willard, in Box Elder County, Utah. Before the admission of Utah as a state, Hon. Joseph L. Rawlins, the territorial delegate to Congress, had this bright schoolboy appointed to a studentship in the military academy at West Point. Four years later, in 1898, he graduated, was commissioned a first lieutenant, and sent to the Philippines. His rise in rank has been gradual and his standing in the army is assured. The colored soldiers from the south who fought valiently in France, owed their splendid discipline to the patient and thorough training they received under the direction of General Cole.

General Briant H. Wells is another native son who graduated at West Point, saw service in the Philippines, and took part in the World War. He became a captain of infantry in 1901 and was connected with the quartermaster's department for a number of years. In 1916 he was stationed at Plattsburg, New York, but in September of that year was sent to the Mexican border. The declaration of war found him in Washington attached to the general staff. In August, 1917, he organized and commanded the 318th infantry of the 18th division, but in December was made a member of the staff of General Trasker H. Bliss, Chief of Staff, by whom he was sent overseas as his special representative. He became a Lieutenant Colonel of infantry in the 6th army corps and, at the close of the war, was made Brigadier General and awarded a distinguished service medal.

Utah has reason to be proud of her officers as well as of her men in the ranks. In every post of duty to which they were assigned they attracted the favorable consideration of those in charge of the military operations.
CHAPTER XIII

Utah's Artillery Regiment

The One Hundred and Forty-fifth Artillery of the American Army was distinctively a Utah organization. It was the particular pride of the people of the state, as it was recruited from the farms and factories, the mines and mills, the stores and shops, from the railways, the ranches, the offices and the schools, from all trades, occupations and professions, from every valley, village, camp and city throughout the commonwealth. Many of the officers and some of the men in this regiment had been identified with the two famous batteries of light field artillery which had distinguished themselves in the Spanish-American War under Captains Young and Grant. These and the cavalry squadrons of the National Guard of Utah were combined, increased to 1,460 men, organized as a regiment and transformed into light field artillery. The state troops were ordered in from Logan, Ogden, Provo, Manti and other points and mobilized at Jordan Narrows, where they began training for war. Colonel Richard W. Young, a West Point graduate and a veteran of the War with Spain, was appointed to the command on the 27th of June, 1917. It was not until August 5th that the regiment was accepted as a part of the federal army and stationed at Fort Douglas. After impatiently waiting and constantly drilling, the Utah Artillery eventually entrained for Camp Kearney, near San Diego, California, to be instructed and exercised in the larger movements of troops in battle formation.

As it entered the federal service the organization was as follows: Colonel Richard W. Young, Lieutenant Colonel William C. Webb, Regimental Adjutant Fred T. Gundry, Battalion Adjutants Captains A. A. Meyers and R. F. King, Majors E. Leroy Bourne and Wm. E. Kneass, with Lieut. B. H. Roberts as Chaplain. The headquarters company was in charge of Captain Fred Jorgensen and Lieutenant Guy H. Holmes; the supply company was under Captain Fred Kammerman and Lieutenant Roy F. Williams. These with Captain A. J. Mech in as Quartermaster constituted the general command.

When they left Utah a mess fund of $10,000 was raised and presented with an assurance that more would be forthcoming as needed. Former Senator Thomas Kearns donated the regimental colors, and the Cleofan society the guidons, with ceremonies befitting the occasion. Twenty thousand school children were excused from classes to watch the imposing parade as the four regiments from Fort Douglas escorted the artillery through the streets of Salt Lake City preparatory to leaving. What would have been a delightful sojourn near the coast under other circumstances was irritating to the Utah men because of their anxiety to cross the ocean and get "into the thick of it."

Although it was a long time before the welcome order came, the regiment furnished more than four hundred men, educated in its ranks, to fill gaps cut in the Allied battle lines. These detachments, sent abroad from time to time, were selected on account of efficiency, physical condition and earnest solicitation. One hundred were assigned to the Seventeenth Artillery and the others were scattered as needed along the whole battle front. Comparatively few returned to their old command, whose quota was kept full by recruiting.

In April, 1918, Colonel Young was promoted to the rank of Brigadier General, and William C. Webb, another Spanish War veteran, who also had served in Battery A of the Utah Artillery in the Philippines, was put in command. Except for a brief transfer to another division in 1918, Colonel Webb retained command of the Utah regiment until it was mustered out at Logan, Utah, in 1919. Lieutenant Colonel E. Leroy Bourne, second in command, had worked his way up from the ranks in the old state militia, through the signal corps and the cavalry troops, and was both strict and popular with his men. Major F. T. Gundry was later transferred to another command, and Major W. G. Williams, who had been active in the organization of the regiment, was given other assignments entirely, notably with the 41st division in France. Chaplain Roberts was tireless in the discharge of his duties and a striking figure wherever he went. As a local newspaper remarked at the time of his appointment, "Major Roberts is no longer a young man in years but in pep and patriotism he is hardly old enough for the selective draft."

In August, a year from the time the regiment was incor- porated in the United States Army, it crossed the Atlantic, halted in England, and landed in France on the 2nd of September, 1918. From La Havre it was sent to Camp De Souge, an artillery center, a few miles inland from Bordeaux. The records of the men in camp and on the target range were not only excellent but exceptional. A large scrap book, containing the orders, special and general, the roster and the transfer lists, accounts of amusements, exercises and movements of the organization, painstakingly compiled by Chaplain Roberts, is on file in the office of the war historian at the state capitol.

No finer types of American manhood donned the uniform than these youthful mountaineers who had been reared on the crest of the continent where the flag floats highest and the feathered emblem of our freedom nestles its young. Eagerly they came to muster and cheerfully they went across. That they were not called into action as a unit was their sincere regret. Their regiment was "over there" and ready, but that was as far as circumstances and German discretion enabled them to go. When the armistice was agreed upon they were standing at attention in the wings awaiting their cue to enter the stage of war, and "Metz" was to be the name of their first act. They felt and expressed a keen disappointment over the sudden breakdown of the enemy, who deserved a lot more punishment, a portion of which they were prepared to administer. However, peace on proper terms is ever welcome, and no one can be rightly reproached for lack of opportunity when he does all his country requires or permits him to do.

At the close of our war with Spain, just twenty years before, there were over 40,000 disgruntled soldiers at Chica-maugua Park who complained that they were "leaving the military service without a battle or a campaign." President McKinley sent them his greetings with this message: "The highest tribute that can be paid to the soldier is to say that he performed his full duty. The field of duty is determined by his government, and wherever that chances to be is the place of honor."
CHAPTER XIV

American Auxiliary Organizations

Several months before war was declared the Red Cross began to make preparations for relief work, which would have been needed even had we escaped active participation. The destruction of life was so appalling that orphans, widows and cripples were increasing beyond the ability of Europe to care for them. Many volunteers were accepted and assigned to duty. The organization established divisions of supplies, finance, extension, canteens, civilian relief and instruction, each in charge of capable men or women.

Classes were conducted in elementary nursing and in the making of bandages and other essentials to the relief of suffering. When the emergency arose they were ready, therefore, to do their bit. After we entered the war canteens for service men were quickly established at central points and public spirited women were in constant attendance. Every town and city in the country had its local chapter and the amount of good accomplished is beyond calculation. The members conducted clothing drives and sent shiploads of wearing apparel to the women and children of war stricken lands.

Henry P. Davidson, Chairman of the War Council of the Red Cross of the Nation, reported as early as September, 1917, that $12,339,681 had been distributed for general relief among the Allies. Probably $300,000,000 was collected and distributed by this agency during the course of the conflict. It was estimated that 500,000 persons had become affected with tuberculosis as a direct result of the war, and that there were at least 400,000 destitute refugees who required assistance. Money, food and clothing were sent to Russia, Rumania, Italy, Serbia, Armenia, Belgium, France and England. Over 2,000,000 people in Western Asia were saved from starvation by the unflagging attention of the Red Cross. Its agents followed close on the track of ruin and by the end of the war had expended almost two millions in Belgium, ten millions in England and sixteen millions in France.

The welfare of the families of our own soldiers and sailors was not neglected. At a cost of $6,000,000 over 300,000 families were cared for, and seven hundred canteens were maintained to supply the wants of enlisted men. Surgical dressings numbering 250,000,000, as well as 2,000,000 pairs of socks and 2,000,000 sweaters were made and sent to the front. The organization increased through the period of the war until it had a membership of 22,000,000 adults and 8,000,000 school children. It enrolled 15,000 trained nurses, organized forty-eight base hospitals with 9,600 doctors and attendants, and a dental force of 3,441, ample for the entire army.

In this work of mercy the women and children of Utah took an active part, and 210,000 pounds of old clothes and many new garments for children were collected and sent to sufferers in the war zones, where distribution was made by Red Cross workers on the ground. The Civilian Relief Committee, under the chairmanship of Mr. Joy H. Johnson, looked after many deserving and needy families, for whom $18,173.18 was expended. The Salt Lake chapter prepared 1,088,329 surgical dressings, which were sent to army hospitals or utilized during the fearful epidemic of influenza which caused more deaths among Americans than did the war.

Miss Damaris Beeman, J. Fred Anderson, Miss Ella Wicklund, Miss E. A. Laughlin and Mrs. W. O. Cleland served in turn as executive secretaries of the central chapter in Utah, and the several managers were F. B. Cook, from November 1, 1917, until February, 1918, when Rev. John Malick succeeded him, to be followed by Robert J. Shields, August 13, 1918. Major Glen Miller, at the head of the military division, was recalled on account of the local epidemic, as he was on the point of sailing to France. Men and women of all denominations served with this popular and active organization and it would take volumes to tell of the good accomplished.

The original Red Cross was organized by a Swiss philanthropist named Henri Dumont, who had witnessed the horrible suffering and mortality resulting from neglect of the wounded after the battle of Solferino on the 24th of June, 1859. At the Geneva convention, four years later, a treaty was made by which the Red Cross was to be recognized and respected by all civilized belligerents thereafter. It was authorized by Great Britain February 16, 1865, by Prussia June 22, 1865, by Turkey July 5, 1865, and later by France and Russia. At the beginning of the World War twelve European nations had guaranteed neutrality and immunity to all Red Cross workers. In America this organization was long since recognized by a congressional act.

The Young Men's Christian Association collected and expended over $200,000,000 for the maintenance of what was termed “a morale-building influence” among overseas troops. There were 3,000 war-work secretaries in the army camps in the United States and 6,000 in Europe. While many criticisms of this organization were made by returning soldiers, it doubtless did a lot of good and was actuated by the kindest motives, even in those particulars with which the boys found fault. Huts were maintained with minor supplies, refreshments, magazines from home and chairs and cheer for the patrons.

The Salvation Army endeared itself to every branch of the service, and its praises are still sung by overseas veterans whenever they get together in reminiscent moods. It was not a rich organization and was not officially recognized, but was assisted in raising funds by certain fraternal orders of a benevolent and protective character and every dollar was put to a practical use. Men and women of the Salvation Army were with the American troops in many engagements. They lived in dugouts and cellars, cleared up corners among the ruins of demolished villages and provided homes, as far as they were able, for the men on the firing line. In the huts they established in the battle zone, the ambulances they operated, the reading and rest rooms they maintained, the Salvation Army was always found where its ministrations were needed, and the coffee and doughnuts distributed by the brave “lassies” will long be remembered by their grateful recipients.

One of the most vigorous and independent organizations engaged in relief work was that of the Knights of Columbus. In its membership were enlisted men from every state, and the club was represented in the trenches as well as in the home camps by some five hundred executive secretaries, while commodious headquarters were maintained in London and Paris. Besides Charles Chapman, chief of the hospital staff, it is recalled that Pat J. Owens, William A. Crowley and W. H. Mathews were in France as field secretaries for the local Knights, while Jas. A. Kelly was wounded in dropping food from a plane to a starving detachment which had been pocketed in the Argonne, receiving the war cross for his act. There were forty-four refreshment rooms at points of debarkation and in the zone of action, and thirty chaplains went everywhere that our troops went. The local chapter turned its beautiful home into a soldiers’ club for the entertainment of lonesome boys away from their folks.

The higher educational institutions of the state were seriously crippled by the enlistment of many professors and whole classes of students. The boards and faculties improved the occasion by tendering the use of quarters and equipment for co-operation in every line of war work. The Agricultural College organized and placed at the disposal of the government one of the most efficient Army Training units in the United States. This was made possible by the energetic support of the Cache County people, by the intelligent direction of the faculty and because of the splendid system of military training which has always been a part of the college course. The State University turned out trained motor mechanics, wireless operators, photographers and other specialists in necessary army work, but was handicapped in the development of its unit because of the epidemic of influenza which created havoc at the training school.

It was a terrible war, but a wonderful experience to those who took part, not only abroad, but at home. In a hundred untried ways and a thousand unexpected places, true patriotism was revealed of a strength and militancy which surprised many of the people who possessed it, and its unfolding may lead to a higher plane of citizenship and to better things in government.
CHAPTER XV

Utah Medical Units Sent Overseas

The losses suffered by the British and French Medical Corps had been so great during the first two and a half years of the war that the armies were in sore need of physicians and the health of civilians in the cities of both lands was greatly jeopardized. A call for help came from the war hospitals, and the first contingent of medical units from the United States landed in England May 18, 1917, constituting the first branch of a land force that ever went from our shores to serve in a European conflict. Their sailing was, therefore, an important event in American history.

Three other units were assembled in New York, two in California, one in Illinois, one in Missouri, and one each from Harvard, Yale and Williams college. On the 27th of May, 1917, Dr. Hugh B. Sprague was authorized by the Director of Military Relief, of the National Bureau of Medical Service, to recruit a motor ambulance company of one hundred men, to be known as the American Red Cross Ambulance Company No. 27 of Salt Lake City. In one week the unit was organized, but Captain Sprague did not receive his commission until July 10, 1917. Drs. Walter A. Whitlock, of Layton, Clarence S. Gardner, of Salt Lake City, Wilson F. McDill, of Idaho, and George F. Davis, of Kansas, were appointed first lieutenants, each of whom received promotions before the end of the war.

From Fort Douglas the unit was ordered to Camp Grant, at Rockford, Illinois, where it became a part of Sanitary Train 311, in which Captain Sprague was advanced to the responsible post of Summary Court officer, and the designation was changed to Ambulance Company 4. After many months of useful service in the army camps of the east the unit sailed from Brooklyn September 17, 1918, landing in Liverpool October 2nd, and in France four days later, where Captain Sprague resumed command. The men of this company engaged in actual field work with the wounded, but were apportioned to different sections as needed. On the 17th of January, 1919, the unit returned to the United States and was mustered out at Camp Grant, January 31, 1919, after an active and useful career of a year and a half.

The first military unit to be sent from Utah to a training camp for war was recruited from the field hospital company which had seen service on the Mexican border in 1916. It was sent to Fort Douglas August 5, 1917, with Major John F. Sharp commanding, but he was soon transferred to the directorship of field hospital work at Camp Kearney, and the command of the First Utah Field Hospital Company devolved on Captain George F. Roberts, whose capable lieutenants were E. F. Chamberlain, A. J. Bowman, F. J. Jensen and J. E. Tyree. The company included these commissioned officers and forty-two noncommissioned officers and enlisted men. Transferred to Camp Kearney the unit rendered valuable service during the fearful epidemic of influenza, and on July 31, 1918, was ordered to Camp Mills, New Jersey.

In August the company left America through the St. Lawrence River, landed in England and proceeded later to France, reaching La Havre September 2nd. Thence it was sent to Grossouvre Cher and quartered in an old chateau which had been made into a hospital. On the 1st of November, after an exciting day of dodging bombs, the unit was assigned to duty in a gas resuscitation hospital three kilometers from the firing line. During the last few days of the war the location was repeatedly shelled, but the company escaped casualties. Following the Armistice it handled an average of two hundred and fifty cases a week until ordered home April 1, 1919. Meantime Major Sharp was made a lieutenant colonel and Captain Roberts and Captain Liggett of the Dental Corps, had become majors. The company reached Utah July 4, 1919, without the loss of a man from injury or disease.

For every man killed in battle seven were wounded, and it is a tribute to the efficiency of the Medical Corps that out of every six men sent to the hospitals because of wounds five were cured and returned to duty. The disease death rate among our soldiers and sailors was lower than in any previous American war, due to inoculation, clean camps, safe drinking water and skillful medical attention.
CHAPTER XVI

Women in the World War

Women played an important part in the grim tragedy, not only in the war zone but at home. In the awakening of a peaceful, comfort-loving people to the perils of German aggression, in the encouragement of men to do their duty, in the shaming of slackers and the apprehension of spies, in the preparation and equipment of troops, in doing unaccustomed tasks that men could be released for military service, in the production and conservation of food, in caring for the sick and wounded, the noble women of this republic accomplished a wonderful work. Side by side with their patriotic sisters of other states toiled the loyal women of Utah. Knitting, sewing, wrapping, packing goods that were needed in training camps or in field hospitals, looking after dependent families whose protectors had answered the call to arms; comforting afflicted and bereaved widows and orphans; suppressing sobs that rose from the pain and apprehension of their own hearts, while the holy water of affection fell from aching eyes on trembling hands; ever brave and ever busy were the women at home.

Behind the blazing battle lines, heedless of death and danger, unmindful of the prowling werwolves of brutality, were fearless lassies of the Salvation Army serving coffee and doughnuts to the famished fighters, or cheering their exile with song and smile; and there were clear-eyed school girls who went with ambulance trucks through fire and hazard; and gentle women who sacrificed luxury and safety, who chanced injury and violence, while they searched the smoking ruins of desolation for helpless victims of inhumanity.

Through the haze of poison-tainted smoke we saw the nurses of the Red Cross, ministering angels of mercy and relief, finding their perilous way over shot-furrowed ground that was wet and slippery with human blood, looking for glimmering sparks of life among the deepening shadows of death, caring for the injured and comforting the dying, while shrieking shells were bursting overhead and bombs were wrecking the very hospitals in which they served.
The heroism of these nurses matched the dauntless valor of men at every front. It required even a higher degree of courage to go unarmed and face the engines of dissolution. Women did not rush into the conflict with a lust of battle in their hearts. Their brains were not on fire with a primitive passion to kill. No fighting instinct tingled through their nerves. Nothing impelled but a sense of duty—a wish to aid. They went resolutely into danger, timid but undismayed, and helped to gather up the wrecks that had been men, to shelter and help the wounded, to watch and wait by the cots of suffering, to whisper consolation to the dying, to close the eyes of the dead.

Heroines they were who conquered by force of will a natural aversion to their self-imposed tasks, while nausea wracked their bodies and sighs of sympathy wrung their heartstrings; who invoked the help of Heaven to enable them to continue their work of mercy, to counteract in some degree the destructiveness of war; who bent above the tormented forms of stricken boys and listened to their last faint words of gratitude or resignation, or to broken messages for loved ones awaiting them in vain at distant firesides.

The lives of these intrepid women were consecrated to the betterment of their race and the alleviation of pain. Danger did not deter nor hardship discourage them. Nor was it the commendation of mankind they sought—but the chance to help, to serve humanity. These were women from the farms and mining camps, from villages and cities; girls reared in ease and working girls; wives of soldiers and wives of officers; daughters of the poor and daughters of the rich, who gave themselves to the service of their country as freely as did any soldier at the battle of the Marne. Some died of exertion and exposure; some were killed in raids and buried with military honors; one was executed for obeying a forbidden impulse of mercy and her pathetic martyrdom became a beacon light upon the path to victory.

Nations that are blessed with such womanhood, and with men who appreciate and respect it, will survive and prosper when the armed legions of terrorism have vanished from the earth and the record of their prowess is but a nightmare of history.

The first Utah woman to reach the front, according to available records, was Miss Mae Morton, a Salvation Army worker in Salt Lake City before and since the war. She served for many months as near the firing line as a non-combatant was permitted to go, but the shifting tide of battle often placed her within the zone of danger, from which she never flinched so long as there was a chance to minister to the needs of the tired and hungry men of the trenches. Miss Ella Wicklund was an active member of the Red Cross, not only in the home work, but in the hospitals overseas. Miss Myrtle V. Butler, of Davis County, saw active service in foreign hospitals. She was one of the first American women to volunteer for overseas duty and is held in grateful remembrance by all to whom she ministered. Miss Joy Decamp, formerly of Salt Lake City, was employed at the Paris headquarters of the American forces. Miss Maud Fitch, of Eureka, went right through the smoke of battle, caring for the wounded while shells were tearing up the landscape all around her. She was decorated with the Croix de Guerre, with a French palm, for her courage and devotion to duty under fire. Miss Stella Sainsbury, formerly superintendent of the Dee hospital at Ogden, was stationed at Chaumont, Gen. Pershing's headquarters, from September 1, 1918, until her return in 1919. Miss Luella Francey left Salt Lake with the second battalion of nurses in 1917, crossed early in 1918, and was stationed in Serbia. Miss Annie J. Hall, formerly of the Dee hospital, was stationed at Brest, France, at the close of the war. Mrs. Mary F. Starr, of Salt Lake City, tried to get into the ambulance service as a driver but was refused on account of the hazard and assigned to duty in France as a canteen worker. These cases are taken at random from newspaper clippings of the time, but a complete list of nurses, as shown on the army roster, follows, the stars representing those who went overseas:

CHAPTER XVII

Courage and Distinguished Service

Volumes might be written concerning the many individual acts of risk and sacrifice performed by American soldiers in the simple discharge of their duties, or in emergencies which put manhood to the supreme test. Take for example the case of Colonel Samuel V. Ham, once a resident of Salt Lake City while quartermaster in charge of the rebuilding of Fort Douglas. He was leading his regiment of infantry in a desperate charge near Magneaux, France, on the 6th of September, 1918, when he fell severely wounded. Unable to move he remained ten hours on the field of battle directing an attack which was finally successful, and then refused surgical attention until his men had been looked after. He was awarded decorations and medals for this. But what German officer ever showed such consideration for his men or indifference to his own suffering?

We cannot overlook Major Charles W. Whittlesey who, with his Lost Battalion, was cut off in a ravine of the Argonne Forest, where they scouted, stood guard, chewed leaves and grass, and fought against odds for five days before help or food reached them. After half their force had been killed the German officer requested a surrender, but the major's reply was similar to that of Cambronne at Waterloo. When finally rescued there were only 394 survivors, 156 of whom were wounded. The defiant major was promoted and awarded a Congressional Medal.

Utah had her share of heroes who won commendation, some who never lived to see the decorations awarded, some who wear only the scars without any crosses and some whose unquestioned heroism and indifference to danger brought neither wounds nor medals. There was Lieut. Clarence E. Allen, who fell at the head of his men in making an advance, whose citations are a story in themselves; and Capt. Chas. E. Chenoweth who "held a dangerous position in the Argonne battle line for many hours until relieved, although severely wounded;” and Sergeant Peter P. Bosone, who, rendered unconscious for several hours by shell fragments, arose from the pile of dead where he had been left, and rejoined his comrades, “an inspiration to the other men;” and there were many who challenged death but went through unscathed.

It was a narrow line of fate which ran between the list of wounded and the list of killed. In many instances it was badly blurred. The grit of the Utah soldier was demonstrated more than once. Take the case of Corporal John E. Holden, of Salt Lake City, as an example. To reassure his parents who had learned he was in a French hospital he wrote: “I am expecting to be sent back to the states by Christmas. I’ve had three operations and all were successful. My left shoulder and right arm have been sewed up but it will be some time before I can use either arm. My jaw has healed up to some extent, my eyes give me no trouble at all and my face is getting into shape again. I have four teeth left, but I am in a ward of broken jaws and it is comical to watch each other at meal times. All of us are fed through tubes. Don’t worry about me as I’ll be able to do most any kind of work in a few months, although I have only one eye and a bunch of wound scars.” The cheerful fortitude of young Holden was characteristic of the country he served and typical of the men of the army in which he fought.

The foreign decorations awarded to officers and enlisted men accredited to Utah, as shown by available records, as follows:

Allen, Clarence E. (deceased), first lieutenant, 30th Infantry, 3rd Division. French Croix de Guerre with palm and gilt star. The palm awarded January 8, 1919, with this citation: “He displayed great bravery and exceptional zeal during the bombardment of July 15, 1918, in going out on several occasions to encourage his men and assist the wounded. He was killed while giving example of courage.” The gilt star awarded Nov. 9, 1918, with this citation: “During the combats of June 7 and 8, 1918, he displayed brilliant conduct, firm courage and great coolness in leading his men through an intense fire of enemy machine guns and artillery.”
Angell, Howard M., sergeant, Company F, 362 Infantry, 91st Division. French Croix de Guerre with gilt star, May 28, 1919, with this citation: "An admirably courageous noncommissioned officer. Although wounded during an advance of his regiment, he refused to be bandaged and continued to command his platoon until the morning of the next day. Had to be formally ordered to the rear."

Ashley, Robert W., captain, Medical Corps, United States Army, attached to 6th Battalion Northampton Regiment, British Expeditionary Forces. British Military Cross, July 18, 1919, British War Office. "In recognition of meritorious services rendered the Allied cause."

Baddley, Leo W., master signal electrician, Company C, 316th Field Signal Battalion, 91st Division. Awarded French Croix de Guerre with gilt star, April 24, 1919, with this citation: "On October 30, 1918, near Evangelichoom, Belgium, he laid telephone lines under the bombardment of artillery and the violent fire of machine guns."

Barton, Milton F., private, Battery C, 17th Field Artillery, 2nd Division. French Croix de Guerre with silver star, Feb. 8th, 1919, with this citation: "On October 8, 1918, near Blanc Mont he volunteered to destroy a tower at the crossroads which the enemy was using as an aiming point and accomplished his mission under a violent bombardment."

Bassett, Clive E., corporal, Company C, 1st Gas Regiment, Chemical Warfare Service, A. E. F. French Croix de Guerre with gilt star, Nov. 24, 1918, with this citation: "He displayed courage and the greatest coolness during a firing accident. Thanks to his presence of mind, he saved the gunners of his piece from certain death."

Brandon, Clyde, private, 82d Company, 6th Regiment, U. S. Marine Corps, 2nd Division, French Croix de Guerre with bronze star, Feb. 16, 1919, with this citation: "From Oct. 3-9, 1918, near Blanc Mont, he volunteered many times to make reconnaissances over ground by artillery and machine guns and facilitated the maintenance of continuous liaison. Displayed the highest qualities of bravery and courage.”
HON. W. W. ARMSTRONG

FEDERAL FOOD AND FUEL ADMINISTRATOR FOR UTAH

Brockbank, Orson H., private, Headquarters Company, 348th Machine Gun Battalion, 91st Division. French Croix de Guerre with silver star, Feb. 8, 1919, with this citation: “He displayed great courage and complete indifference to danger in participating in the construction of telephone lines in front of Audenarde under a most violent bombardment, and on the night of October 31, Nov. 1, 1918, set the finest example for all.”

Browning, William J., first lieutenant, Medical Corps, U. S. Army, attached to 42nd Field Ambulance, British Expeditionary Forces. Awarded the British Military Cross, July 18, 1919. “In recognition of meritorious services rendered the Allied cause.”

Buchanan, Delbert, sergeant, Company L, 362d Infantry, 91st Division. French Medaille Militaire, May 7, 1919, with this citation: “For extraordinary bravery under fire at Steenbrugge, Belgium, on Oct. 31, 1918, having discovered a machine gun position in a group of buildings on the edge of a village, he went to the attack heedless of danger, and with the aid of three men succeeded in killing and dispersing the enemy, thus permitting an entire wing of the company to progress.”

Carlson, Enoch E., private, Battery C, 17th Field Artillery, 2d Division. French Croix de Guerre with silver star, Feb. 8, 1919, with this citation: “On Oct. 7, 1918, near Blanc Mont, he found an Austrian 88 mm gun on the front line and in view of the enemy. He turned it against the German infantry and fired it under heavy bombardment.”
Chamberlain, Max C., private, Company A, 28th Infantry, 1st Division. French Croix de Guerre with palm, Nov. 6, 1918, with this citation: “A courageous and devoted soldier. On July 19, 1918, although already twice wounded at the commencement of the attack he continued to advance until the objective of the day was attained. He persisted in remaining with his platoon until he could no longer fire his automatic rifle.”

Conroy, Edward E., second lieutenant, Infantry, attached to 5th Regiment, U. S. Marine Corps, 2nd Division. French Croix de Guerre with bronze star, under date, 1918, with this citation: “Led his company unit with great courage and coolness in a hand to hand fight with an enemy superior in number, which was repulsed with high losses.”

Coulter, Halvor G., major, Coast Artillery Corps. French Ordre des Palmes Universitaires.

Crandall, Robert L., private, Company A, 305th Infantry, 77th Division. French Croix de Guerre with gilt star, under date April 16, 1919, with this citation: “Although under shelter from the fire of machine guns and trench mortars he went out under violent barrage to assist some wounded comrades and saved the lives of two of them.”

Dahl, Albert R., private, 18th Company, 5th Regiment, U. S. Marine Corps, 2d Division. French Croix de Guerre with bronze star, under Order No. 11,549 “D,” Nov. 15, 1918, with citation: “Although wounded he assisted, under a violent artillery fire, some wounded comrades who were more seriously injured.”

Fraser, Walter, major, Veterinary Corps, with G.-4, General Headquarters, A. E. F. French Ordre du Marite Agricole (officier), by Presidential decree of September 24, 1919.

Gardner, Robert E., first lieutenant, 316th Engineers, 91st Division. French Croix de Guerre with silver star, April 24, 1919, with this citation: “On Nov. 1, 1918, at Waereghem, Belgium, he commanded his platoon and continued the construction of a bridge across the river Lys under the bombardment and the fire of five enemy airplanes.”

Goss, Richard E., private first class, Ambulance Service. French Croix de Guerre with bronze star, Nov. 29, 1918, with this citation: “On July 22 and 23, 1918, he effected the evacuation of the wounded from the battalion first aid station at Charentigny with a zeal and indifference to danger that were admired by all. He returned with his ambulance riddled with shell fragments.”

Guymon, Vernon M., sergeant, 76th Company, 6th Regiment, U. S. Marine Corps, 2nd Division. French Croix de Guerre with bronze star, under date Nov. 14, 1918, with this citation: “He carried a message under a violent machine gun fire, thus enabling reinforcements to arrive in time to hold a village which we had just occupied.”

Hale, Girard V. B., corporal, Ambulance Service. French Croix de Guerre with silver star, under date Mar. 18, 1919, with this citation: “On September 27, 1918, having been affected by gas shells at the first aid station of la Butte de Souain, he would not consent to go off duty and would not be evacuated until formally ordered by his lieutenant. He left the field hospital on his own initiative and went directly back to his section and immediately resumed the difficult service of evacuations at Somme-Py and at St. Etienne-a-Arnes.”

Haynes, Frank H., first sergeant, Company D, 23rd Infantry, 2d Division. French Croix de Guerre with bronze star, under date of Feb. 8, 1919, with this citation: “During the offensive operation near St. Etienne-a-Arnes from Oct. 3-9, 1918, he displayed remarkable coolness and courage under a violent fire of artillery and machine guns.”

Hofhines, Elm D., corporal, Company L, 362 Infantry, 91st Division. Belgian Croix de Guerre. For extraordinary heroism in action near Steenbrugge, Belgium, Oct. 31, 1918. When the left flank of his company was held up by heavy machine gun fire, Corp. Hofhines, in company with three others, went forward in the face of heavy machine gun fire and succeeded in cleaning out a machine gun nest in a group of houses just outside of the town, enabling the entire line to continue its advance.

Johnson, Edwin E., private, Supply Company, 5th Regiment, U. S. Marine Corps, 2nd Division. French Croix de Guerre with silver star, Nov. 25, 1918, with this citation: “He kept up the supply of the troops in the first line under a violent bombardment of shells of all calibers, gas and high explosive.

Johnson, Joseph A., sergeant, Company E, 23rd Infantry, 2d Division. French Croix de Guerre with silver star, Jan. 22, 1919. “During the offensive operations from Oct. 3 to 9, 1918, near St. Etienne a-Arnes, he displayed heroism in assisting his company commander to consolidate a position and organize the company. His courage and coolness were a fine example for the other soldiers.”

Kimball, Gordon N., lieutenant colonel, Judge Advocate General's Dept., French Order des Palmes Universitaires, Officer d'Academie (argent).

Leavell, John H., captain, 316th Engineers, 91st Division. French Croix de Guerre with gilt star, Feb. 7, 1919, with this citation: “An officer of extraordinary heroism. On the night of Nov. 1-2, 1918, with four men, he entered the town of Audenarde, which was still occupied by the enemy, and reached the opposite side, gathering valuable information upon the bridges destroyed, the location of the depot of material necessary for their repair, and on the emplacements of the enemy machine guns. Encountering a hostile patrol he killed or wounded several Germans and captured a spy.”
Lee, Orson M., private, first class, Headquarters Company, 39th Infantry, 4th Division. French Croix de Guerre with silver star, June 19, 1919, with this citation: "Brilliant conduct during the combat of the Cresnes Wood, France, on July 18, 1918, in voluntarily accompanying his officer through a violent enemy barrage. This officer having been seriously wounded, he remained with him under the hostile fire until he was relieved and rescued several hours afterward."

Littlefield, Edmond A., sergeant, Ambulance Service. French Croix de Guerre. Silver star awarded on April 8, 1918, 22nd French Division, with the following citation: "By their courage and endurance they effected rapid evacuation of the wounded. They maintained their service up to the most advanced elements in the midst of machine gun fire and under very perilous conditions. Displayed a fine example of self sacrifice." Was awarded a second silver star with this citation: "Of absolute devotion to duty and tireless ardor, he accomplished his work under perilous conditions at Vonoq, on November 4, 1918, and gave a fine example of coolness in repairing his ambulance for several hours under a violent shell fire."

Lubers, Bruce C., second lieutenant, 20th Company, 5th Regiment, United States Marine Corps, 2nd Division. "During the period from October 4-6, 1918, near St. Etienne-a-Arnes, he displayed remarkable courage and coolness in leading his platoon to the attack under a violent fire of artillery and machine guns."

McAllister, Theodore H., corporal, Co. B, 1st Field Signal battalion, 2nd Division. "At Vierzy, on July 18, 1918, he rendered the most conspicuous service in constructing and maintaining the telephone lines under violent bombardments and with the greatest indifference to danger."

Malaby, Dewey S., private, 79th Company, 6th Regiment, United States Marine Corps, 2nd Division. French Croix de Guerre with two bronze stars. Bronze star awarded under Order No. 11,547 "D," dated November 15, 1918. General Headquarters, French Armies of the North and Northeast, with the following citation: "Displayed the greatest courage and endurance in carrying messages for nine days to advanced positions under violent artillery and machine gun fire." Second award: "During the period from October 2-10, 1918, at Somme-Py, he coolly and courageously performed his duties as liaison agent passing on numerous occasions through violent barrages.”

Merrill, Alberto E., first lieutenant, 347th Machine Gun Battalion, 91st Division. French Croix de Guerre with silver star, under date of April 24, 1919, General Headquarters, French Armies of the East, with the following citation: “On November 2, 1918, near Audenarde, Belgium, with one other officer he made a reconnaissance in the town under a violent bombardment. Thanks to this reconnaissance, he was able to place the guns of his company in favorable positions for sweeping the bridge.”

Milne, Marion R., sergeant, 20th Company, 5th Regiment, United States Marine Corp, 2nd Division. French Croix de Guerre with silver star, under date of May 22, 1919, General Headquarters, French armies of the East, with the following citation: “On duty as liaison agent at Bouresches, June 25, 1918, he displayed extraordinary heroism in carrying messages back and forth under a violent bombardment.”

Monk, Francis L., (deceased), private, Company A, 307th Infantry, 77th Division. French Croix de Guerre with gilt star, under date of April 16, 1919, General Headquarters, French Armies of the East, with the following citation: “He went to the aid of a severely wounded comrade by crawling over open ground under the fire of machine guns and dressed his wounds. Was wounded during the course of this exploit.”

Nebeker, Frank K. Jr., private, first class, Ambulance Service. French Croix de Guerre with bronze star, under date of November 15, 1918, with the following citation: “During the course of the battle of July 15 and 16, 1918, he kept up the evacuation of the wounded by driving continually and with great courage over violently bombarded routes.”
Nelson, Carlyle L., first lieutenant, Air Service, United States Army, attached to 131st Squadron, French Air Service. French Croix de Guerre with palm, under date of January 10, 1919, with the following citation: "While attached to the 4th Bombardment Group he displayed remarkable zeal and bravery under all circumstances. On September 12, 1918, he carried out two successive bombardments. Firing from very low altitude in extremely bad weather he surprised and set fire to an enemy balloon. On September 14, during the bombing of a distant large railway station he participated in a desperate combat between his squadron and thrice its number of the enemy pursuit planes and brought one of his adversaries down in flames."

O'Brien, Thomas J., second lieutenant, Ambulance Service. French Croix de Guerre with palm and silver star. Palm awarded under date of January 4, 1919, with the following citation: "An automobile ambulance section of the first order which, under the command of the French Lieutenant Fabre and the American sergeants O'Brien and Rich, accomplished some trips of extraordinary boldness during the battle of Champagne from July 15 to 18, 1918. Contrary to all expectations and in spite of violent barrages it succeeded on more than a hundred successive journeys in reaching the first aid stations in the front line and evacuating their wounded. Animated with great courage and spirit of initiative he departed at the heels of the regiments in search of a practical passage over the Aisnes and in spite of great difficulties in crossing he directed his ambulances with rapidity and precision."

Park, Stanzius P., wagoner, Supply Company, 15th Field Artillery, 2nd Division. French Croix de Guerre, with bronze star, under date of January 24, 1919, with the following citation: "On October 10, 1918, having had the four mules of his team wounded he rearranged the latter under a violent fire and carried rations to an advanced position."

Purcell, Milton M., battalion sergeant major, Headquarters Detachment, 91st Division. French Croix de Guerre with silver star, under date of April 24, 1919. "During the offensive from the Lys to the Escaut in Belgium from October 31 to November 11, 1919, he rendered great service to the intelligence section of the staff.”

Radmall, Reuben W., (deceased), private, Battery D, 15th Field Artillery, 2nd Division. French Croix de Guerre with silver star, under date of Feb. 8, 1919, with the following citation: “During the Champagne offensive from October 2-12, 1918, while on duty as liaison agent at the regimental post of command, he executed a mission in perfect and courageous manner carrying all the messages rapidly and regardless of the violent enemy fire. Was killed in the course of the action.

Reasoner, Edward G., private first class, Company F, 362nd Infantry, 91st Division. French Croix de Guerre with bronze star, under date of February 8, 1919, with the following citation: “During the combats near Steenbrugge, Belgium, from October 31 to November 2, 1918, he volunteered several times to carry messages over terrain that was violently swept by the enemy artillery and machine guns.”

Redman, Frederick G., private, Ambulance Service. French Croix de Guerre with bronze star, under date of March 31, 1918, medical service, 37th French Division, with the following citation: “A driver as courageous as he is modest. Always ready to fulfill the most dangerous mission. He particularly distinguished himself on March 23, 1918.”

Rhivers, Donald Ellis, captain, Corps of Engineers, Department of Construction and Forestry, Service of Supply, American Expeditionary Forces. Serbian Order of St. Sava, by Royal Decree of January 6, 1920.

Rowen, Arlon, private, 16th Ambulance Company, 2nd Division. French Croix de Guerre with bronze star, February 6, 1919, with this citation: “From October 4-9, 1918, near Blanc Mont, he displayed remarkable courage in transporting the wounded under fire.”

November 11, 1918, with this citation: "He displayed remarkable coolness in the capture of Bouresches on June 6, 1918, keeping his piece in constant action when five men of his crew had been wounded." Bronze star awarded under date November 15, 1918, with this citation: "A valiant rifleman always on the alert. He constantly displayed the greatest courage and rendered conspicuous service."

Simkins, James C., private, Company M, 362nd Infantry, 91st Division. French Croix de Guerre with bronze star, February 8, 1919, with this citation: "He particularly distinguished himself on November 1, 1918, at Steenbrugge, Belgium, in keeping up the liaison under an intense fire of machine guns. While returning from carrying a message he went, in spite of a violent fire, to the assistance of some civilians in a house that had just been blown up by a mine."

Sorenson, John O., private, Company D, 316th Engineers, 91st Division. French Croix de Guerre with gilt star, February 7, 1919, with this citation: "Displayed extraordinary bravery under fire. During the morning of November 2, 1918, while Audenarde was still in the hands of the enemy, he succeeded in making a reconnaissance through the town. Brought back thus important information regarding destroyed bridges, the means to re-establish them and the location of material to be used for their reconstruction."

Stanton, Charles E., colonel, Quartermaster Corps, Chief Paymaster, American Expeditionary Forces. French Legion d'Honneur July 26, 1919, with this citation: "An American officer whose merit was most especially marked in his relations with the French authorities."

Steinberg, Philip, private, Machine Gun Company, 9th Infantry, 2nd Division. French Croix de Guerre with bronze star, November 28, 1918, with this citation: "He cared for the wounded under a violent bombardment and, with a great indifference to danger, aided his officers in evacuating some wounded comrades."

After having been wounded he continued to use his rifle throughout the action.” Italian Groce Di Guerra. “For extraordinary heroism in action near Ramanovka, Siberia, June 25, 1919.”

Sullivan, Michael J., sergeant, Company M, 362nd Infantry, 91st Division. French Croix de Guerre with gilt star, April 24, 1919, with this citation: “Near Steenbrugge, Belgium, on October 31, 1918, he commanded his platoon under a violent fire of artillery and machine guns. He advanced and kept up a perfect liaison with the other elements of the firing line.”

Swens, Alfred, (deceased), private, first class, Company M, 127th Infantry, 32nd Division. French Croix de Guerre with silver star, March 16, 1919, with this citation: “Distinguished himself on a patrol sent out for the purpose of locating a machine-gun nest. Gaining contact with the enemy, he succeeded, with several comrades, in capturing 2 machine guns and 76 prisoners, which he brought back to the rear through a violent artillery barrage.”

Webb, Hammer R., sergeant, Company G, 2nd Field Signal Battalion, 1st Division. French Croix de Guerre with bronze star, May 5, 1918, with this citation: “Entrusted with the repair of the telephone lines in a dangerous zone they fulfilled their mission with courage. They worked one whole night under the most violent bombardment of gas shells, which caused heavy losses in their detachment.”

Wells, Briant H., brigadier general, Chief of Staff, 4th Army Corps. French Legion d’Honneur, April 4, 1919.

Wilkes, Joseph S., (deceased), private, 79th Company, 6th Regiment, United States Marine Corps, 2nd Division. French Croix de Guerre with bronze star, November 14th, 1918, with the following citation: “He maintained the liaison under a violent machine-gun fire between the front and the battalion post of command, going and coming with important messages, braving death each instant.”
Doubtless there were other awards, as the Utah office has no list of Distinguished Service Medals. The press reports of the time mentioned citations to Generals Hines and Wells; to Captain Charles E. Chenoweth and Lieutenant Russell L. Maughan; to Chaplain Calvin Smith, Sergeant Peter P. Bosone, Privates George D. Hughes, John H. Lee and Harold E. Glenn of Salt Lake; to Theodore F. Lee and Hans M. Nagle of Ibapah; to Philip D. Allison and Albert Earl Taylor of Ogden; to Francis M. Bird and Marc Lipman; to Earl C. Pressley of Hurricane and J. J. Hansen of Logan; and it was also related that King George personally pinned a medal on Sergeant Carl Stephan of Salt Lake City. Chaplain John T. Axton, of Salt Lake, was also decorated for meritorious service.

American citations are of record in the office of the Adjutant General for the following Utah soldiers: Lee C. Blackett, Lawrence C. Morgan, Arle P. Westers, Ernest Nuhn, Francis S. Krayenbuhl, Frank M. Frary and George Battle.
The State Council of Defense

While the courage and gallantry of our sailors and marines are proverbial, and the valor and virtues of American fighting men are worthy of the highest encomiums they receive, it would be an error for any historian to overlook "the men behind the men behind the guns". When President Wilson made his stirring plea to the men, women and children of the United States to enlist in some capacity in the "great civilian army without whose backing mere fighting would be useless," he gave us to understand that wars may be won in the wheatfield as well as on the battlefield.

There may be those who think that the only thing a government has to do in time of war is to call for men, dress them in uniforms, fill their knapsacks with food and their belts with ammunition, hand them guns and send them forth to do or die. But there are many things to consider besides the perils of shot and shell. The withdrawal of bread winners, producers, craftsmen and laborers from every section of the country, without some adequate provision to carry on their work, would seriously impair the efficiency of the fighting men and bring distress to those they left behind. In a period of destructiveness it is necessary to produce and conserve to a point beyond the requirements of normal times.

Owing to poor crops and a foreign demand for all our surplus staples, when we entered the great war the food supply and farm yield were in a very unsatisfactory condition. There had been an alarming decrease in the production of cereals in the preceding year. An unfavorable season in many prolific sections had caused a shortage in several essential articles of food, and prospects were not encouraging. So the President earnestly besought the people to get down to work and to correct the national fault of "wastefulness and extravagance". The response was immediate, universal and effective.

The German press, however, misconstrued this appeal to be a "cry of distress". One of the leading newspapers of that country announced that America was "facing a crop failure which would make it impossible to supply her army or her allies with food". Professor Wygodinski, the agricultural expert of a German university, solemnly assured his government that "Nemesis was knocking at America's door and famine was staring her in the face." But effective organizations, working under volunteer experts, aided and abetted by Providence, soon filled the granaries and outgoing ships with an abundance for all practical purposes.

On the 29th of August, 1916, several months before we entered the war, the Council of National Defense was created at Washington, probably in anticipation of a renewal of offensive tactics by the U-boats under the policy of the German Chancellor who apparently had annexed the Atlantic Ocean to the Kaiser's domain. This organization comprised the six heads of Federal Departments and an advisory commission of seven members, nominated by the Council and appointed by the President. The conception of this body came from the tender, by delegates of five national engineering organizations in March, 1916, of their services in making an inventory of the nation's resources. This was followed by the offer of medical services, in any emergency which might arise, made by representatives of five medical and surgical associations who met in Chicago on the 14th of April, 1916. From a consideration of these proposals by the President sprang the Council of National Defense.

This organization was charged with the duty of surveying military and naval resources, investigating the facilities of railways, waterways, and highways for the mobilization of troops, devising methods to increase production on farms and in factories for both civil and military needs, and the creation of such commissions and relations as might be essential to national defense. In this way, for at least six months prior to the declaration of war, which the government still earnestly hoped to avert, data was compiled which furnished an estimate of the possibilities and needs of the country and a general idea of the organization necessary to secure desired results.

After the bugle sounded the work of this council was better appreciated, for it was ready to present definite plans and to suggest additional agencies to facilitate the business of getting ready for war. Then came the Food Administration, the Fuel Administration, the War Trade Council, the War Industries Board and the Labor Bureau, each placed in charge of an expert in the line to be followed.

Men of exceptional ability, high character and unquestioned patriotism were chosen for this stupendous task of putting our unmilitary republic on a war basis, and preparing it, both at home and abroad, for a struggle of indefinite duration. Nearly every one so selected left his personal affairs in the hands of others and gave his time and services to the government, without pay or hope of reward except that which would inure to all alike through victory and peace. Among them were Hoover, Lovett, Garfield, Baruch, Willard, Coffin, Gompers, Rosenwald, Brookings, Davidson, Ryan, McCormick, Jackling and Frayne, successful in whatever they undertook. There were eminent doctors, and surgeons, and lawyers, and engineers, and inventors, who gave the best that was in them, with no selfish ends to serve, with the welfare of the country in mind and a grim determination to do everything possible to aid the army and navy in winning the war.

As it was in the nation so it was in the several states. Local co-operation was indispensable to success, and the same class of citizenship was in demand. In Utah, men and women of the highest type were selected for these important tasks, and the splendid work they undertook with unselfish devotion to the cause of humanity, and accomplished with the help of a willing and loyal constituency, is a lasting memorial to the industry, generosity and patriotism of a great commonwealth.

The State Council of Defense for Utah was organized April 26, 1917, at the office of the Governor in the State Capitol. A request had gone to every state in the Union from the Council of National Defense. Governor Bamberger explained the purpose and read the following letter from Hon. Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War:

"To the Honorable Simon Bamberger, Governor of Utah.

"Sir: The Council of National Defense, as empowered by act of Congress, August 29, 1916, is now engaged in the work of preparation for the war and in the co-ordination of the resources and energies of the nation."
"It holds itself in readiness to co-operate with the states to bring about the most effective co-ordination of activities and procedure for the general good of the nation and the successful prosecution of the war, and it invites the states to advise with it.

"To further the prompt and energetic organization which the situation demands, it recommends the creation by the states of committees with broad powers, to co-operate with the Council—such committees to perhaps be known as State Councils of Defense—these committees to be representative of the state's resources.

"Please advise us as promptly as possible of action being taken or contemplated in Utah in furtherance of the National Defense. Please send us full information with copies of all laws, proclamations and forms relating thereto.

Very truly yours,

(Signed) Newton D. Baker
Secretary of War and Chairman of Council of National Defense"

A permanent organization was effected with Mr. L. H. Farnsworth as Chairman, a most important position in war time. He was also made Chairman of the Executive Committee and an ex-officio member of each sub-committee. Mr. Farnsworth proved an ideal man for the place, as he gave his time unselfishly and unreservedly, carefully considered every suggestion offered and, as a tribunal of last resort in controversies confined to the state pertaining to war activities, he was always fair but firm in his decisions.
When differences of opinion arose in the Council, as they always do where strong men assemble for the discharge of grave duties, his personality, his judgment, his impartiality, never failed to secure complete harmony and to pave the way for an easy solution of the problems presented.

Dr. W. C. Ebaugh, of the State University, was appointed permanent Secretary, a post he held until departure from the state, when Mr. Arch M. Thurman succeeded him on the 10th of August, 1918. Three Vice Chairmen were named, as follows: Messrs. W. R. Wallace, C. C. Richards and T. N. Taylor. The Assistant Secretary was J. Edward Taylor and the Field Secretary E. F. Taylor. This completed the general organization.

A finance committee, with Clarence Bamberger as chairman, was authorized to arrange for a loan of $25,000 from the State Board of Loan Commissioners, consummation of which was reported and ratified at a meeting held two days after the State Council was organized. This provided a fund for the purchase of seeds to be supplied farmers at a reasonable price and rate of interest, so that additional spring planting could be done without delay and the production of foodstuffs thus stimulated throughout the state. The money was distributed through the county industrial agents in the employ of the Agricultural College, who were instructed to act in concert with the various county organizations created by the Council of Defense. It was important to get seeding under way, as the season was advancing and the prospective demand would doubtless tax the capacity of all farming communities to the limit. Arrangements were also made and subsequently carried out to look after fall planting at the proper time and in the same way. The concise reports of Chairman Redman of the Committee on Seeds, presented and filed from time to time, show the conscientious thoroughness with which this duty was performed.

A national conference of State Council representatives had been called for May 2, 1917, to meet in Washington. Mr. A. N. McKay was selected as the delegate from Utah. Upon his return he made a report in which were detailed for the first time the recommendations afterwards printed, of departmental heads who comprised the Council of National Defense. Taking up those of the Secretary of War he said that the federal government could best be served:—

1. By promoting patriotic spirit and educating people as to the size of the task ahead of the Nation.
2. By aiding in recruiting young men for the National Guard.
3. By aiding in securing enlistments to the regular army.
4. By assisting in making the proposed conscription operative and effective.
5. By holding a successful holiday on the date of enrollment.
6. By scrutinizing the exemptions claimed for various reasons.

Secretary Daniels merely requested assistance in securing men for the navy and marine corps.

Secretary Wilson asked help in the following particulars:

1. In maintaining standards of living, health and welfare among laborers.
2. In keeping the employers and the workers on a basis of mutual understanding.
3. In turning the "broken time" of laborers to the use of farmers.
4. In assisting idle men, not liable to military duty, to get work on farms.
5. In securing the services of boys to assist with war gardens and farm work.

Secretary Lane urged help in the cultivation of the land, as follows:

1. That within irrigation projects where water is obtainable without the usual restrictions.
2. That which is under private or corporate irrigation control.
3. That which is held under military grants but is suitable for cultivation.
4. That which is owned by the states but might be made available for use.
5. That which is subject to lease and tillage on Indian reservations.

6. And he also requested that mining companies should be encouraged to increase their output of minerals useful in war.

The following general recommendations were made: To help float bonds and collect war revenue; to reduce waste in the homes; to curtail extravagance in public eating places; to foster the drying or canning of edible products; to aid government agents in the conservation of food and fuel and in bringing to justice those who might disregard these imperative needs of the nation.
CHAPTER XIX

Plan and Personnel of the Council

The following memorandum of state organization, supplied by the national conference, was adopted by the State Council at its meeting of May 15, 1917:

"The conditions of modern warfare require thorough co-ordination of national, state, county, municipal and individual resources and abilities. If democracy is successful to defeat autocracy, broad-minded co-operation of all units is imperative. To this end the Council of National Defense has called a meeting of state representatives to consider the creation and effective use of State Councils of Defense to act in harmony with the National Council.

"A plan for state organization has been worked out and is submitted in the interest of uniformity for the adoption of the states which have not already acted. The following text is explanatory of a chart of organization attached hereto:

"(II) The State. The governmental unit within the boundaries of which are found the resources vital to the defense of the nation and from which authority to its Council of Defense must emanate.

"The State Councils of Defense should co-operate with each other and with the Federal Government in organizing and directing the resources of the State in men and materials, and should recommend changes in the state laws which, to make them available and effective for National use, may become expedient. When the State Council exercises its powers and duties on a given subject at the request..." of the Council of National Defense, it is suggested that the work should be done in the manner and form prescribed by the National Council."

"(IV) Distribution of Functions. The following committees are suggested as probably expedient for appointment in most states:

"(1) Finance. This committee should be a committee on ways and means, where necessary; otherwise, should be a committee on administration of funds appropriated for the use of the State Council.

"(2) Publicity. This committee should have the duty of controlling and disseminating information and carrying on the needed propaganda, having to do with the work of the Council. It should also conduct the educational work found necessary by the several committees.

"(3) Legal. This committee will advise the Council on legal matters. (Its services were also tendered the enlisted men.)

"(4) Co-ordination of Societies. The function of this committee should be the co-ordination of the activities of the State Council with all bodies working in similar fields.

"(5) Sanitation and Medicine. This committee should deal with all matters relating to hygiene, medicine and sanitation.

"(6) Food Supply and Conservation. The supply, distribution and conservation of food, the avoidance of waste, and all the other various allied subjects, are assigned to this committee.

"(7) Industrial Survey. The purpose of a state industrial survey is to supplement the survey of the Naval Consulting Board, now in the hands of the Council of National Defense, with information relative to plants not included in that survey, and to bring that survey up to date. It should be broad enough in scope to include all industries effective for war purposes. A standard form and method for taking this survey accompany these recommendations.

"(8) Survey of Man Power. Until the Federal Government determines on the method of registration of man power it is impossible to formulate an exact plan which will meet both state and federal requirements.

"(9) Labor. This committee is concerned with the supply, distribution and welfare of labor.
Military Affairs. The primary duty of this committee will be co-operation with the Federal Government in the creation of the National Army. It should also deal with a state guard when authorized. When the regular army or the national guard, or both, are to be brought up to war strength, an important recruiting duty will devolve upon this committee, and it may also render valuable service by assisting in the selection and procuring of camp sites and facilities.

State Protection. This committee should keep a watchful oversight upon all important points of possible danger to the State, with the idea of planning and providing necessary military or civil protection.

Transportation. There is not likely to be need for local assistance to the National Government in the railroad field. Electric and motor transportation deserve and should receive careful consideration. Highways and waterways are also of importance, and their conditions throughout the state should receive careful study.

Local Councils of Defense. Local Councils should be organized in such a manner as each State Council may determine.

The State Council not only accepted the general outline presented by the National Council of Defense, but adopted a supplementary plan presented by Chairman C. C. Richards of the Committee on Permanent Organization, as follows:

"The chairman is to be ex-officio a member of each committee. The number of members and personnel of each committee shall be determined by the chairman, and may be changed by him from time to time. Upon recommendation of the chairman of any committee, the chairman of the State Council may designate additional citizens to serve as an advisory council to co-operate with such committee.

"The plan submitted by the National Council provides that the State Councils of Defense should co-operate with each other and with the Federal Government in organizing and directing the resources of the state in men and materials, to make them available and effective for national use, and should recommend changes in the state laws which may become expedient. When the State Council exercises its powers and duties on a given subject at the request of the Council of National Defense, it is suggested that the work should be done in the manner and form prescribed by the National Council.

"In addition to the foregoing, we recommend the selection of the following officers, whose duties shall be similar to those customarily performed by like officers in other organizations: 1. A Vice Chairman, 2. A Secretary, 3. A Treasurer."

The several sub-committees were as follows: Finance, Heber J. Grant, Chairman, W. W. Armstrong, W. R. Wallace, W. C. Orem, W. L. Wattis, C. W. Whitley and George H. Dern.

Speakers: F. W. Reynolds, Chairman; Ross Beason, and Delbert Draper.
Legal: C. C. Richards, Chairman; W. H. Leary, R. B. Harkness.
War Emergency Legislation: Jos. L. Rawlins, Chairman; W. H. Leary, Stephen L. Richards, Frank E. Holman, Carl Badger, Chas. R. Hollingsworth, Jacob Coleman.
Sanitation and Medicine: Dr. R. S. Joyce, Chairman; Arch M. Thurman.
Industrial Survey: T. R. Cutler, Chairman; C. W. Nibley, A. C. Rees.
State Protection: F. C. Richmond, Chairman; B. F. Redman, R. S. Collett, A. R. Heywood, J. W. Funk.
Transportation: S. R. Inch, Chairman; W. C. Orem, C. W. Nibley, L. R. Eccles.
Survey of Man Power: C. B. Stewart, Chairman; G. V. Lawry, J. Y. Jenson.
Seeds: B. F. Redman, Chairman; W. R. Wallace.
Live Stock: C. B. Stewart, Chairman; Geo. T. Odell, J. Edward Taylor.
Non-War Construction: F. S. Murphy, Chairman; Otto E. Ashbridge, Edward E. Jenkins, P. L. Doran, R. E. Currie.
Research and Invention: Guy Sterling, Chairman; Frank L. West, William D. Boner.
Central Committee, Soldiers' Welfare Fund: David A. Smith, Chairman; E. O. Howard, Treasurer; J. David Larson, Executive Secretary; W. F. Jensen, Leon Sweet, Harold B. Lamb, Frank B. Cook, L. C. Miller, Mrs. E. B. Critchlow, Miss Elsa Bamberger, Mrs. W. Mont Ferry, Mrs. J. C. Hanchett, Mrs. Ruth May Fox.

Employment Bureau: Geo. S. Auerbach, Chairman; Nephi L. Morris, Major Harold P. Fabian, Otto E. Ashbridge, Arch M. Thurman.

Commercial Economy Board: W. F. Jensen, Chairman; B. F. Redman, T. N. Taylor.

In close co-operation with these committees were the several federal organizations, deriving their authority and instructions direct from the national capital, such as the Food and the Fuel Administrations, and the U. S. Employment Bureau, with P. J. Moran, as chairman, and Jos. Quinney, C. J. Humphries, W. M. Knerr and J. Wm. Knight as members. There was also a Boys' Working Reserve, under the chairmanship of J. Edward Taylor, who was assisted by F. W. Kirkham, O. A. Kirkham, A. L. Mathews, John T. Caine III, J. Morrell George and G. J. Reeves.

The National War Savings Committee for Utah, which sold $5,614,540 worth of these stamps in the state, was composed of the following well known citizens: Geo. T. Odell, Director, James W. Collins, State Chairman, E. V. Smith, Vice-Chairman, W. R. Putnam, in charge of publicity, and John S. Critchlow, at the head of the speakers' bureau.
CHAPTER XX

Local Councils of Defense

Each county, except Daggett, had an organization analogous to that of the state. The best type of citizenship was selected by Chairman Armstrong of the committee, and hearty, intelligent co-operation was the result. The list follows:

Beaver County: J. F. Tolton, Chairman, Finance; D. I. Frazer, Secretary-Treasurer, Publicity; Russel E. Parsons, Legal; Dr. Jos. T. McGregor, Sanitation and Medicine; Henry Frazer, Food Supply and Conservation, Industrial Survey; William Hurst, Labor; R. H. Strickland, Vice-Chairman, Military Affairs; J. H. Barton, State Protection; George Jefferson, Transportation; H. T. Hanks, Survey of Man Power; W. J. Burns, George Marshall, Mrs. Margaret Murdock, Women's Work.

Box Elder County: John D. Peters, Finance; Victor E. Madsen, Publicity; Wm. J. Lowe, Secretary, Legal; D. W. Henderson, Sanitation and Medicine; John P. Holmgren, Food Supply and Conservation; Moroni Mortensen, Industrial Survey; C. G. Adney, Labor; Wynn L. Eddy, Chairman, Military Affairs; R. L. Fishburn, State Protection; David O. Stohl, Transportation; David Holmgren, Survey of Man Power; Annie W. Littlewood, Women's Work.

Cache County: J. W. Funk, Chairman, Finance; Chas. England, Publicity; Roy D. Thatcher, Secretary, Legal; D. C. Budge, Sanitation and Medicine; Evan R. Owen, Food Supply and Conservation; Weston Vernon, Industrial Survey; Geo. Y. Smith, Labor; W. O. Adams, Military Affairs; Hyrum Hayball, State Protection; H. A. Pederson, Transportation; Jos. E. Cardon, Survey of Man Power; Mrs. G. R. Hill, Women's Work.

Carbon County: Carl R. Marcusson, Finance; R. W. Crockett, Secretary, Publicity; F. E. Woods, Legal; A. D. Sutton, Sanitation and Medicine; A. Z. Marshall, Food Supply and Conservation; A. W. Horsley, Chairman, Industrial Survey; Frank Bennett, Labor; Albert Bryner, Military Affairs; Carlos Gunderson, State Protection; Robert McKune, Transportation; Neil Madsen, Survey of Man Power; Miss Margaret Horsley, Women's Work.

Davis County: John W. Thornley, Finance; W. P. Epperson, Publicity; L. I. Layton, Secretary, Legal; Dr. B. L. Kessler, Sanitation and Medicine; H. H. Blood, Food Supply and Conservation; Henry W. Stahle, Industrial Survey; Nephi Palmer, Labor; J. G. M. Barnes, Military Affairs; Stearns Hatch, State Protection; L. J. Muir, Transportation; E. P. Ellison, Chairman, Survey of Man Power; Mrs. J. W. Thornley, Women's Work.

Duchesne County: Homer P. Edwards, Secretary, Finance; Fred L. Watrus, Publicity; C. L. Ashton, Legal; R. S. Coilett, Food Supply and Conservation; M. P. Pope, Vice-Chairman, Industrial Survey; Thos. Rhodes, Labor; R. M. Pope, Military Affairs; Wm. O'Neil, State Protection; Flora E. Collett, Treasurer, Women's Work.

Emery County: Peter Neilson, Finance; David S. Williams, Secretary, Publicity; R. A. Howard, Legal; Dr. Bruce Easley, Sanitation and Medicine; H. A. Nelson, Food Supply and Conservation; Niels J. Christensen, Industrial Survey; G. E. Anderson, Labor; Henry Thompson, Chairman, Military Affairs; Wm. T. Reid, State Protection; Nephi L. Williams, Transportation; Wm. J. Killpack, Survey of Man Power; Mrs. Louisa Oveson, Women's Work.

Garfield County: Joseph E. Heywood, Chairman, Finance; Fred E. Eldredge, Secretary, Publicity; Susie Johnson, Legal; Mrs. Geneva Carhart, Sanitation and Medicine; James Houston, Vice-Chairman, Food Supply; Quince K. Kimball, Industrial Survey; Thomas Haycock, Labor; John King, Military Affairs; G. J. Goulding, State Protection; Maurice Cope, Transportation; John Black, Survey of Man Power; Vida Prince, Women's Work.

Grand County: W. R. McConkie, Finance; Lorin L. Taylor, Treasurer, Publicity; C. A. Robertson, Vice-Chairman, Legal; Dr. J. W. Williams, Sanitation and Medicine; F. B. Hammond, Food Supply and Conservation; F. W. Strong, Secretary, Industrial Survey; J. G. McBride, Labor; W. J. Bliss, Military Affairs; J. P. Miller, Chairman, State Protection; H. S. Rutledge, Transportation; D. M. Cooper, Survey of Man Power; Mrs. Knox Patterson, Women's Work.
Iron County: J. Clayton Mitchell, Secretary, Finance; Alex. H. Rollo, Publicity; E. H. Ryan, Legal; S. J. Foster, Sanitation and Medicine; John U. Webster, Food Supply and Conservation; Roy F. Homer, Industrial Survey; H. J. Doolittle, Labor; Wilford Day, Chairman Military Affairs; Morgan Richards, State Protection; James C. Robinson, Jr., Transportation; Maeser Dalley, Survey of Man Power; Allie Knell, Women’s Work.

Juab County: G. M. Whitmore, Finance; Dennis Wood, Publicity; T. H. Burton, Legal; G. W. Lunt, Sanitation and Medicine; J. W. Bowd, Food Supply and Conservation; J. W. Paxman, Industrial Survey; Walter Fitch, Labor; Chas. Zabriski, Military Affairs; Orson Cazier, State Protection; T. C. Winn, Transportation; Amy B. Grover, Women’s Work.

Tintic District: J. E. Burch, Chairman; C. E. Huish, Walter Fitch, Jr.

Kane County: Heber J. Meeks, Chairman, Finance; W. T. Dobson, Secretary, Publicity; John F. Brown, Legal; Urban H. Norris, Sanitation and Medicine; W. W. Seegmiller, Food Supply and Conservation; David Rust, Industrial Survey; Israel Heaton, Labor; John W. Glazier, Military Affairs; Geo. H. Robinson, State Protection; C. John Smith, Transportation; Edward Carroll, Survey of Man Power; Rose H. Hamblin, Women’s Work.

Millard County: Geo. W. Nixon, Finance; Jos. Smith, Publicity; Wm. Higgins, Secretary, Legal; Wm. R. Thompson, Sanitation and Medicine; Jacob Hawley, Food Supply and Conservation; Jas. A. Melville, Industrial Survey; J. A. Kelly, Labor; Alonzo Kimble, Military Affairs; Daniel Stevens, Chairman, State Protection; M. M. Steele, Transportation; Wm. T. Pratt, Survey of Man Power; Miss Millie Callister, Women’s Work.

Morgan County: Charles Heiner, Finance; Warren Porter, Secretary, Legal; C. H. Ruble, Publicity; R. J. Richards, Sanitation and Medicine; Daniel Heiner, Chairman, Food Supply and Conservation; H. B. Crouch, Military Affairs; J. S. Hopkins, State Protection; Willard Toone, Transportation; Levi Waldren, Survey of Man Power; Mrs. Maytie S. Turner, Women’s Work.

Piute County: W. E. Bay, Secretary, Finance; D. H. Robinson, Sanitation and Medicine; Joseph Ipson, Food Supply and Conservation; A. F. Haycock, Chairman, Industrial Survey; Earl Willis, Military Affairs; Reuben DeWitt, State Protection; Garfield James, Transportation; W. H. Luke, Survey of Man Power.

Rich County: Arch McKinnon, Chairman, Finance; Fred R. Morgan, Publicity; Jas. W. Walton, Legal; Dr. M. D. Reay, Sanitation and Medicine; G. H. Robinson, Food Supply and Conservation; J. S. Pusey, Industrial Survey; Shelby Huffaker, Labor; Wm. E. Marshall, Military Affairs; J. G. Muir, State Protection; Hyrum Neberker, Transportation; Peter M. McKinnon, Secretary, Survey of Man Power; Mrs. C. W. Walton, Women’s Work.

Salt Lake County: David McMillan, Chairman, Finance; C. L. Countryman, Publicity; David W. Moffat, Secretary, Legal; Dr. F. E. Straup, Sanitation and Medicine; W. C. Winder, Food Supply and Conservation; Wm. W. Le Cheminant, Industrial Survey; Frank Nelson, Labor; J. W. Mc Henry, Military Affairs; J. A. Roswell, State Protection; P. Bintz, Transportation; T. W. Dimond, Survey of Man Power; Mrs. T. W. Dimond, Women’s Work.

Salt Lake City had an organization separate from that of Salt Lake County, but acting in perfect harmony therewith. The chairman was Lee Charles Miller, the executive secretary, J. D. Larson, who, with Mayor W. Mont Ferry, completed the executive committee. Other members of the city organization were: Heber J. Grant, on the Finance committee with Chairman Miller, and the following active workers: Publicity—James B. Whitehill; Legal—James Ingebretsen; Sanitation and Medicine—James L. Franken; Food Supply—Dr. John A. Widtsoe; Conservation—Mrs. C. H. McMahon, Mrs. Geo. M. Bacon, Mrs. Jeanette A. Hyde; Industrial Survey—W. C. Orem; Labor—Otto E. Ashbridge; Military Affairs—David A. Smith and P. J. Moran; State Protection—William Spry and F. C. Richmond; Transportation—J. A. Reeves; Survey of Man Power—S. R. Inch.

It may well be questioned if an able, more representative body of men and women ever associated in the state for any purpose, or if any group ever worked together more harmoniously. All were actuated by the loftiest motives of patriotism, many had sons or brothers in the uniformed ranks, and the excellent work of the civilian army won from their worthy chairman the highest praise. In his final report to Governor Bamberger, Mr. Farnsworth said: "Whatever success has attended our efforts is due to the patriotic co-operation of the citizens of Utah, who have at all times promptly responded to every call."
CHAPTER XXI

General Activities of the State Council

The committee having charge of food supply and conservation, under the able direction of Chairman E. G. Peterson of the Agricultural College of Utah, was merged with the Federal Food Administration after the enactment of a "National Food Control Act," and the executive secretary of the committee took a similar position under the federal organization, which also named Prof. Peterson as Chairman of the Committee on Sugar Production. This connecting bond between the State Council of Defense and the Federal Food Commission prevented duplication of work and loss of energy in the most vital civil activity of the war. One of the first matters to receive attention, as noted elsewhere, was the distribution of seeds over the farming area of the State. The sum of $31,773.61 was supplied for this purpose in 1917, and $28,590.02 in 1918. This total of $60,363.63 was secured by crop mortages, payable at crop time, and practically all was eventually repaid. Over a million and a quarter pounds of seeds were distributed in this way which otherwise might not have been planted.

There was a shortage of apple boxes in the fall of 1917, owing to the diverting of timber and mills to other uses. The State Council of Defense supplied 200,000 boxes, enabling the growers to save a large portion of their crops. Over nine tons of arsenic was furnished for the destruction of grasshoppers, which threatened the crops in 1917. Later on the Council was able to adjust water distribution in a way to save the production of more than 5000 acres of land.

On the 15th of May, 1917, Chairman Fransworth sent to the Utah delegation in Congress a telegram, as follows: "The Utah State Council of Defense directs me to communicate to you the great apprehension felt by the citizens of Utah because of the length of time, now amounting to nearly six weeks, since the declaration of war, that Congress has consumed in the discussion of war measures now pending, and to state to you that this Council entertains the earnest hope that Congress will act upon these measures without greater delay than is absolutely essential to due deliberation, under the vital necessity of quick and definite action. The Council asks that this telegram be presented to both Houses of Congress.” Acknowledgments were subsequently received from the Utah Senators and Representatives.

On the 7th of March, 1918, Chairman Farnsworth received from Secretary Franklin D. Lane the following telegram: “Present conditions show clearly that the strength, safety and welfare of the country demand that all residents shall use our language, understand our industrial needs, and be imbued with the spirit of American democracy. To assist in devising measures for bringing this about I am inviting you and others whose office or business gives them special interest in this subject, to meet in person with me in Washington April third. May I have your personal acceptance by wire?”

Chairman Farnsworth immediately replied as follows: “I most heartily endorse the sentiment expressed and the need of a movement along the line indicated in your telegram seventh. You may depend upon my full co-operation and my presence at the conference in Washington April third.”

He went and learned at that meeting, and from inquiries he made afterwards, that there were many communities in some states of the middle west where only German was spoken by nine tenths of the people, and that no attempt had been made to learn or to use any other tongue. It also developed, from Mr. Farnsworth’s inquiries, that a carefully developed plan had been followed in the public schools of certain states to popularize German ideals and the heroes of German history. On his return Chairman Farnsworth made this formal report:

“To the Members of the Utah State Council of Defense.

Ladies and Gentlemen: In response to the invitation extended by the Secretary of the Interior, Honorable Franklin D. Lane, I was present at the conference held Wednesday, April third, in the Auditorium of the Department of the Interior Building, Washington.

“From the letter to me of Secretary Lane, I quote the following: ‘Americanization is now before the country as a war measure. A national plan of Americanization has been placed in operation by the Council of National Defense and the Department of the Interior acting jointly. To win the war a unified people must be back of the fighting line. Yet, of the thirteen million persons of foreign birth residing in the United States, over five millions do not speak our language and have little or no accurate understanding of our customs and industrial conditions. Eight millions are employed in our industries, particularly in the manufacture of munitions of war, in building ships, in mining coal, and in transporting food, fuel and human beings. We can hardly expect unqualified allegiance and full and effective support of these men in our efforts in behalf of democracy, freedom and a higher civilization, until they know our language and are given better opportunities to understand our customs, our ideals and the requirements of our industries. It is for this reason that I am inviting prominent officials and business men to meet me in Washington, Wednesday, April third, for the purpose of devising ways and means by which the nation, states and local communities may co-operate in the accomplishment of this task.'

"There were about two hundred and fifty present at the meeting, composed of Governors of many of our states, the chairman or a representative of each State Council of Defense, and the executive officer or president of some of our most important industries, railroads, commercial and banking institutions, and also Mr. Gompers, representing the labor element. Mr. Lane was the only formal speaker. His address upon Americanization was most impressive, earnest and inspiring. Four resolutions were adopted, dealing with the following subjects:

"1st. Asking federal aid to the states in carrying on Americanization work.

"2nd. Requesting industries employing large numbers of non-English men to co-operate in the national plan.

"3rd. Asking Congress for adequate appropriations for carrying on the work.

"4th. Asking the school boards throughout the country to adopt rules requiring that elementary subjects be taught in the English language only."

Chairman Farnsworth also attended a meeting in the office of Secretary Daniels, of the Navy Department, on the 4th of April. Drastic action was urged with reference to spies, propagandists, traitors and knockers. He reported Secretary Daniels as saying: "When full Americanization has been accomplished not only will every American be mobilized for war, but we will put the fear of God into the hearts of those who live among us and fatten on us, but are not Americans." It was shown at these conferences that the Germans had organized a crafty opposition in this country to Liberty Loans, to Red Cross drives, and to all campaigns for aiding the army and navy. The German policy of "peaceful conquest" was exposed, and the "Delbruck Law" explained, which provided that all Germans, naturalized in the United States, could retain their German allegiance by registering at a German consulate.

In his interesting and startling report, Chairman Farnsworth gave some statistics showing the foothold Germans had obtained in this country—enough to constitute a balance of political power and turn an election as their likes and dislikes might dictate. "New York City," he said, "is the third largest German-speaking city in the world; thirty German newspapers, with a circulation of 529,386, are published in New York City; sixty-seven are printed in Wisconsin, with a circulation of 511,407. The total circulation of newspapers printed here in the German language is 3,353,626. In many cities, owing to German power and local influence, considerable sums are expended yearly in teaching German—in some instances six times as much is being appropriated to teach German to Americans as is spent to teach Americanism to German immigrants." The following from Chairman Farnsworth's report embraces a lesson of the war which should not be forgotten:

"There are in the State of Nebraska between two hundred and three hundred parochial German schools. Elementary subjects are taught in German. German patriotism is taught and the German national hymn is sung as part of the school routine. American national songs are never sung in one hundred of these schools and the American flag is never flown. It is said that in some of these schools the children are whipped for speaking English. To counteract this influence and this German propaganda there must be a vigorous and far-reaching activity among all loyal citizens, and it would seem to me that loyal Americans of German birth must see to it by their own work, among their own people, that such conditions cannot and must not prevail. The American people will not stand for it. It is a reflection upon the loyal German American population to permit such conditions to exist, and unless this un-American and disloyal condition be stamped out the loyal German Americans will be the great sufferers because of their being German.

"A grave and critical condition now confronts our country and its Allies. We are called upon to make every sacrifice, our lives and our property, if need be, to forever crush the imperial government and military power of Germany, whose only standard is world dominion and the exercise of a brutal power. Ours is a righteous and just fight for humanity and victory, with the help of God, will be our reward." (Signed) L. H. Farnsworth, Chairman.

After some discussion, the Council adopted this resolution: "Resolved, that it be the sense of this Council that we urge upon the superintendents of public instruction, the State University, the Agricultural College, and all other institutions of learning within the State of Utah, that they forthwith discontinue, where they have not already done so, the teaching of the German language and the German ideals."

At the same time a special committee on Americanization was appointed, as follows: Harold M. Stephens, Chairman; G. V. Lawry, Paul Armstrong, Mrs. W. N. Williams and Mrs. Leah Widtsoe.

The attitude of the Kaiser towards conquered people in the past indicated the stress which he placed on the teaching of German in the schools. Poland was Prussianized in this way. German became the only language of legal recognition in courts or in business. Postmen were forbidden to deliver letters addressed in Polish, and Poles were compelled to change their names to a German form. The Danes of Schleswig were treated in the same way, and no one counted on recognition in Alsac-Lorraine after the Franco-Prussian war, unless he could present his case in the German tongue. "To conquer the school is to conquer the future," said Bismarck. So the Council of Defense was on the right track when it adopted that resolution.

There were numerous drives which the State Council of Defense had to sponsor or conduct. Campaigns for the sale of bonds, of war savings stamps, or thrift stamps, of pressure cookers, of "smileage books," of buttons for divers and sundry designations; for war work, for mercy funds, for library contributions, for entertainments, for mess funds, for everything that sympathetic and resourceful people could figure out as expressions of patriotism.
The Chairman of the Council of National Defense, in letters to Mr. Farnsworth, on more than one occasion, expressed appreciation of the showing made by the State Council of Defense of Utah. His report to the President, dated July 24, 1918, contained this general statement: "It is difficult to estimate the importance of the service rendered since our entrance into the war by these State Councils, their County Councils and the multitude of workers banded together under them, whom we estimate to number at least one million. I feel that you, as their Commander-in-Chief, will be proud of their unique contribution in the war and will use your authority to broaden the scope of their activities as conditions permit, so that they may go on to still greater achievements." The President replied July 30, 1918, as follows:

My dear Mr. Baker:

I have read with great interest your account of the achievements of the State Councils of Defense and your general summary of the activities in which they are now engaged. It is a notable record, and I shall be glad to have you express to the State Councils my appreciation of the service they have so usefully rendered. I am particularly struck by the value of extending our defense organization into the smallest communities and by the truly democratic character of a national system so organized.

I believe in the soundness of your contention that in the interest of economy and efficiency such machinery as that provided by the State Council system for the execution of many kinds of war work should be utilized as far as possible by Federal Departments and Administrations. May I suggest, therefore, that you communicate to the heads of all such departments and administrations my wish that when they are considering extensions of their organization into the states, or new work to be done in the states, they determine carefully whether they cannot utilize the State Council system, thus rendering unnecessary the creation of new machinery; and that they transmit all requests for action by the State Councils through the State Councils Section of the Council of National Defense.

Cordially and sincerely yours,

Woodrow Wilson.
CHAPTER XXII

Special Work of the Committees

Publicity was essential to the success of the Council of Defense in the prosecution of war work. By keeping the people posted as to what was being done they were kept interested. They saw things they could do and did them. Each citizen was interested to the limit of his capacity for enthusiasm. If he did not have a boy at the front his neighbor did, and the responsibility of backing up the fighting line was persistently forced home as ways and means were pointed out.

General information was disseminated through a generous local press, which filled its pages with matter of value and interest. The chairman of the Publicity Committee, Mr. A. N. McKay, of the Salt Lake Tribune, had the intelligent co-operation of all newspapers in the city and state. From time to time bulletins and circular letters on various topics were issued and circulated with beneficial results. The pronounced success of draft registration was partly due to tactful publicity work, which created a favorable impression of military service, especially among foreign-born residents of the state. This committee took an active part in the food and fuel campaigns, in securing a large registration of young men for military training at the various colleges, and in every other phase of war work.

It is unnecessary to mention the importance or enumerate the duties of the Committee on Finance, to the chairmanship of which Mr. Clarence Bamberger was appointed, and in which he was later succeeded by Mr. Heber J. Grant. In raising money for any and all purposes, from placing a twelve million dollar bond allotment to buying a water right, this committee was always "on the job." In the five loan campaigns, the two Red Cross drives, the Soldiers' Welfare, United War Work and Y. M. C. A. solicitations, and in other campaigns of record, it accomplished wonderful results.
The Commercial Economy Board, according to Chairman Farnsworth's final report, "made possible the saving of two million dollars and the release of 1,500 men to war industry, all of which was accomplished at a total expense of less than $4,000." As some of its reforms may become permanent it may be well to recount them as set forth in the report of the Council:

"The first specific problem handled by the board was the restricted delivery. The general recommendations classified the towns with concrete problems for each. In towns of less than 2,000 inhabitants, merchants were asked to eliminate all deliveries; in towns from 2,000 to 5,000 inhabitants, one delivery a day was urged, to be made in the afternoon and to comprise orders received in the morning of the current day and during the preceding afternoons; in towns of 5,000 to 10,000 inhabitants, one delivery a day in each of the two geographical zones, one zone to receive a delivery in the afternoon; in towns of more than 10,000 inhabitants, one delivery a day over each route, with the further recommendation that the geographical plan be used if possible.

"In the successful promulgation of this system a great deal of help was received from the patriotic women of the state, from the churchmen in urging the patriotic observance, from the motion picture theatres in flashing upon the screen slides, detailing the new system, and from the newspapers in the shape of publicity, and in many cases, editorial support. The merchants themselves, both retail and wholesale, gladly co-operated and confidential reports received by the board from them on specially prepared blanks, conclusively demonstrated savings which totaled almost $2,000,000 per year, with but very little inconvenience to the public, once the households were readjusted to the new methods of buying. In addition to the financial saving, the restriction of deliveries made possible the releasing of 550 men and boys for other work; that is, the merchants were enabled to take care of their business with less help and greater efficiency.

"A very material economy was effected in the delivery of milk and cream by the perfection of a regulation requiring the customer to provide an empty milk bottle each time a full one was delivered. This regulation had the effect of saving thousands of bottles. Incidentally the regulation made it possible to continue the delivery of milk in Salt Lake City in bottles, a condition which was seriously threatened last May, because of the fact that it was impossible to secure a new supply of bottles from the manufacturers.

"At a conference of laundry operators it was revealed that delivery costs in that line of business ranged from seventeen per cent to twenty-five per cent of the gross value of the bundle delivered. By the perfection of a zone system and the suggestion that patrons, wherever possible, turn in soiled clothes, a reduction of approximately 30% was made in the delivery. At the same time it greatly assisted the laundries in distributing their work over a period of six days instead of five days, as had been the custom. This in turn made possible a reduction in the working forces of approximately 15%, thereby releasing that many additional people for other essential war work. Practically the same regulations were used for the cleaning and dyeing industry."

The board received the endorsement and assistance of ninety-five per cent of the business men of the state, many of whom requested that steps be taken to make it a permanent organization.

There was also a committee for the discouragement of nonessential construction while men and materials were in such demand. When the Pantages theatre building was begun the Commercial Economy Board, the War Industry Board and the Committee on Non-war Construction all took some phase of the controversy under consideration. A hearing was held by the Council, with regular judicial decorum. On the showing that all material was on hand before the war and that the workmen employed were not liable to military call, the permit was granted. In every case of construction a searching inquiry was made before building was commenced.

When the State Council of Defense was asked by the War Department to make a military survey of the resources of the state, to prepare maps showing roads and conformation of the country, and to compile other information of value to an army, the work was placed in the hands of experts whose report, as included in that of Chairman Farnsworth to Governor Bamberger, recites the following details:

"The state was theoretically divided into zones, or quadrangles, of 15 minutes of latitude to 15 minutes of longitude, areas of approximately 13 miles in width and 17 miles in length, and a separate report is made on each quadrangle as field work on the same is completed, accompanied by a special military map of the zone reported upon. These reports contain data regarding physical conditions, description of the terrain in each zone, natural resources, etc., which might be required by a commander of troops assigned to military operations within a quadrangle.

"Each quadrangle report contains detailed information on topographical features, nature of soil, locations and descriptions of commanding positions, sections of land suitable for aeroplane landings, observation points, camp sites, climatic data, health and sanitary conditions in each section, locations and description of rivers and streams, lakes and ponds, springs and wells, reservoirs and water tanks, transportation facilities, including railroads, stage lines, wagons, pack horses, automobiles and their passenger capacity, etc., lines of communication—telephone and telegraph—power lines, and sub-stations.

"A feature of paramount importance in the Reconnaissance Reports is the information required by the War Department on roads, trails and bridges. Each road and trail is treated as a separate unit and described in detail, necessitating personal measurements by employees of this department to ascertain the locations of excessive grades, curves, etc. Detailed descriptions of bridges of more than 20-foot span, together with sketches and photographs of the same, are included in the reports.

"The reports include a complete survey of all industries in each zone; their nature and number, together with the man power, or number of employes, and their nationalities. The population of cities and towns with the percentage of foreign born within the areas mapped, the principal industry in each, transportation facilities, lines of communication, water and fuel supply, natural forage, number of buildings and their dimensions (those that might be of use during military operations) kind and quantity of supplies on hand, and, in fact, any information that might appear in the judgment of the reporting officer of military value, is given.

"Up to December 1, 1918, sixty-three (63) quadrangle reports had been completed and forwarded in duplicate to the War Department. Each report was accompanied by a progressive military map of the area being reported upon, showing the locations by a system of numbers of points of vulnerability and other particular features desired by the War Department. The territory so far covered by the survey under the auspices of the State Council of Defense, comprises approximately 13,923 square miles, the quadrangles being embraced by Box Elder, Cache, Weber, Davis, Salt Lake, Tooele, Utah, Juab and Millard Counties. There remain ninety-two (92) quadrangles yet to be reported on. The greater portion of this territory, however, is in outlying districts. Field work has been completed in the more important, or congested districts within these areas.

"With the completion of each individual report, the boundaries of the area mapped are checked with an index map furnished by the War Department, insuring accuracy as to locations, etc. The reports range in length from 10 to 143 typewritten pages, legal size, exclusive of military maps, bridge sketches and photographs. A copy of each report is on file in the office of the State Engineer.

"While information on roads, trails and bridges, and other important features is secured by personal surveys, valuable assistance is being rendered by the engineering departments of the various railroads, telephone and telegraph companies, mining companies, power companies, large industrial concerns, state and county officials, members of the County Councils of Defense, and others."

The Transportation Committee and the Committee on Highways, acting with the Food and Fuel Administration, wrestled with the problems of car shortage and the shipment of perishable products. The Council committees were able to put the interior counties in better touch with the outside world than they had ever been before. Express lines running from the railway across Uintah and Duchesne counties, and the aid given the farmers of the southern part of the state, were beneficial to the localities as well as to the nation at large. In this connection a campaign for increasing the pork output was carried on by the Livestock Committee, and better protection of sheep from predatory animals was urged upon the state authorities. It was claimed that losses aggregating a million dollars annually, sustained by the stock raisers of Utah, were no longer to be regarded merely as a loss to them, but as that much lost to the nation in its need of food. In the final report of the State Council of Defense, filed January 1, 1919, the several undertakings of the transportation committees were enumerated and the following aims, bearing on the future, were set forth:

“It is anticipated by the committee that highways transport work will be an important factor during the reconstruction period and they are now planning an extension of their organization and efforts so as to cover the entire state. On account of food problems remaining acute, there will continue to be demands upon the production of the state, which production can not be effective without assistance is rendered the farmers in the matter of transportation to market. The efforts of the committee will be concentrated on: First. Establishing transportation facilities for the interior sections of the state which will make the products of that section available. Second. Relieving terminal congestion and encouraging short hauls by motor traffic instead of railroad. Third. Co-operation with the State Road Commission and State Engineer, to the end that the roads in the various parts of the state may be put in such a condition that motor transportation is feasible and profitable.”

For the purpose of preserving a pictorial record of Utah’s part in military operations, the State Council of Defense appointed a committee to obtain motion pictures of the boys in training at Camps Kearney and Lewis. Such pictures were made and placed on exhibition in different theatres and have been added to the historical treasures of the state.

Propagandists and other disturbing or disloyal elements were kept in check by the constant vigilance of the Committee on State Protection, under the aggressive chairmanship of Mr. F. C. Richmond, assisted by Messrs. Redman, Collett, Funk and Heywood. The work of this organization, while it could not be made public, was nevertheless effective and deserving of commendation.

An advisory committee for soldiers and sailors was composed of Messrs. Harkness, Grant, Wallace, Redman and McKay. In legal and business matters these men stood ready to offer advice and protect the interests of those who, by reason of their enlistment, were no longer able to give attention to business matters which might arise in their absence. Judge Harold M. Stephens canvassed the state bar and announced that the lawyers in general had agreed to give legal advice without charge to all enlisted men having need of the same.

The Committee on Sanitation and Medicine was active in enrolling physicians and surgeons for war service. It investigated the means employed in Europe for restoring cripples to their full usefulness, and took steps to educate these victims of the war along industrial lines wherein they could make a living for themselves or piece out the aid they might receive from the government.

There was a committee on War Camp Community Service headed by Mr. C. B. Hawley, and another for handling the Soldiers' Welfare Fund, with Mr. David A. Smith as Chairman and Mr. E. O. Howard as Treasurer, both of which helped to make training camp routine less monotonous.

The Committee on Child Welfare, originally in the women's division of the Council of Defense, was later reorganized under Dr. E. G. Gowans, a well known educator and authority on juvenile problems. To provide against neglect of children during war time activities the federal authorities organized and adopted as their slogan: "Save a hundred thousand babies and give the children a square deal." A campaign for this purpose was waged according to the following program:

1. Public protection of maternity and infancy.
2. Mother's care for elder children who are often left to shift for themselves.
3. Enforcement of all child labor laws and full schooling for all children of school age.
4. Recreation for children and youth, clean, wholesome and protected from any form of exploitation.

In each county the work was placed in the hands of a committee made up of the superintendents of schools, the chairman of the Parent-Teachers' Association of the Home and School League, the chairman of the Committee on Sanitation and Medicine and the chairman of the local Women's Committee. The extension division of the University of Utah, through its Department of Medicine, prepared a leaflet dealing with the care of children from the prenatal period to school age. Co-operation was given by the State Bureau of Health and Children's Bureau, the Department of Public Instruction, the American Medical Association, the Nurse's Association, the Home and School League, the Parent-Teachers' Association, the Women's Federated Clubs, the Civilian Relief Committee of the Red Cross, the Utah Public Health Association, the Extension Division of the Agricultural College, and other associations.

No work was farther reaching in its influence than that done by the Committee on Americanization; nor should it be discontinued so long as foreigners are admitted to our country. During the war the morale of the army was jeopardized because of the 1,243,801 males of alien birth between 21 and 30 years of age registered to fight, 400,000 of whom could not speak English. As there are still 2,500,000 foreign-born residents of the United States who cannot converse in the language of the country, the necessity for some sort of action is evident. One of the first essentials of citizenship is a knowledge of our official language. Until that is understood it is difficult to make a prospective voter appreciate our institutions. Many portions of the country are worse off than Utah in this particular, although in certain sections over twenty per cent of the residents are foreigners. A large proportion of the foreign born people of Utah are found in Salt Lake, Carbon, Utah, Weber, Juab, Cache and Summit Counties. The census of 1910 showed that, out of a population of 373,351, there were 53,393 foreign born whites here. The immigration bulletins show that since then over 12,000 immigrants giving Utah as their destination were admitted into the United States.

Judge H. M. Stephens, at the meeting held May 11, 1918, reported a plan for carrying on the work of Americanization by a course of education given (1) in public addresses, (2) in night schools and extension work, and (3) by legislation providing for such instruction. The work thus begun should continue and the class of legislation recommended ought to be adopted in every state of the Union.

Under P. J. Moran, one of the most experienced and successful employers of working men in the entire west, the Committee on Labor established an employment bureau which was operated in connection with the Board of War Labor Policies. Subsequently Mr. Moran was appointed Federal Director of the United States Employment Service, and the duties of similar organizations naturally gravitated to him. Early in February, 1918, a campaign to enlist men in the working reserve for war industries was successfully conducted by the State Council and the United States Public Service Reserve. Much publicity was given to the movement and in the course of three weeks about three thousand five hundred men, including artisans of every craft and many unskilled laborers, were registered.

Utah responded to every call made by supplying more labor than was asked. A number of Utah men entered various war industries prior to March, 1918, and many went direct to the shipyards and munition plants, wherefore no record was made of these volunteers. While recruiting men for work outside the state, the United States Employment Service took care to protect all local industries. The organization of this service had three representatives in each county who were subject to orders from Chairman Moran.

The Committee on Mineral Production, under Chairman George H. Dern, made its headquarters at the office of the Utah Branch of the American Mining Congress, where Manager A. G. Mackenzie rendered valuable assistance in many ways. Mineral specimens were solicited through the press, and the committee gave advice and information to the senders. Those which were identified as war minerals were retained in the office with the necessary accompanying data. Utilization by the government of the work done by the committee depended on Governmental action through the so-called "War Minerals Bill," which did not become a law until October 5, and was not made operative until after the armistice had been signed.

As the second largest copper producing state, Utah supplied trainloads of this indispensible metal to be fashioned into weapons and munitions of warfare. The Utah Copper Company opened its mines and mills to capacity and furnished millions of tons. Other metals were in demand and the development work essential to an enlarged output offered Utah people a further opportunity to contribute to the cause, for the increased cost of labor, owing to a scarcity of men, removed all consideration of adequate returns. In addition to this peculiar situation the abrupt termination of the war suddenly ended the demand and left many companies in a critical condition, which Congress was asked to partially relieve.

The Boys' Working Reserve, under the direction of J. Edward Taylor, was created by the Federal Department of Labor, but the State Council, before this bureau was inaugurated, had begun the work of enlisting boys for farm work and other industry, sending 528 youngsters to the beet fields, besides placing 438 adults, unfit for military service, on farms. The slogan "work or leave" did not crystalize into a mandate, but the sentiment was strong enough to be audible. It must not be understood that boys were sent out promiscuously. They were established in regular camps, equipped with sleeping tents, mess tents and commissary wagons. More than a thousand acres of beets were thinned in this way which otherwise would have been neglected.

In preparation for the second year of activity a very complete enrollment of the boys of the state was made, not only of those 16 years of age and older, but also of those from 12 to 16 years as a junior organization. Since the federal government could not recognize boys under 16 years of age, the juniors were under state supervision. To encourage them to do their bit the State Council furnished a button bearing the state seal, around the edge of which were the words, "Junior Boys Working Reserve, Utah." Although the organization was more complete and better prepared for service, there was less demand for boys in the summer of 1918 than during the previous summer, owing to an influx of Mexican labor. In October, however, when the apple picking, potato and beet digging season was at its height, there came a renewed demand for help. The schools had closed because of the influenza epidemic, so the State Board of Health gave permission to the State Director to enroll and place boys on farms under careful supervision. These camps were all recruited in Salt Lake City. Each town in the state furnished boy labor in its immediate vicinity, but no data is available as to the numbers and results of their work.

The Speakers' Bureau, including the Division of Four-Minute Men, was another important factor in the organization of the state. It held itself in readiness to co-operate with the Washington Bureau in carrying information to the people on war emergency topics, and assisted in meeting demands for publicity in each of the campaigns and drives conducted by war organizations. This band of able workers contributed time and talent, the influence of which was discernible in the splendid record made by the Council.

After peace was declared the State Council of Defense took an active part in reconstruction work by establishing employment bureaus for discharged soldiers and sailors. About 10,000 men were looking for a chance to re-enter civil life and half that number were placed in positions, while readjustments gradually took care of others. At the same time the Council was urging the release of men who were anxious to get home. Until the time of disbanding it carried on the correspondence necessary to secure action on allotments and allowances which had not been fully settled at the close of the war.

After the Chairman finished making his final report to the Governor, on the 26th of June, 1919, he was presented with an album containing photographs of the members, Hon. Heber J. Grant making the presentation speech on behalf of the State Council of Defense. Mr. Farnsworth expressed his appreciation and his pleasure in the association which had continued during two memorable years. Governor Bamberger thanked the Council for the whole-hearted manner in which the members had responded to the call and the fidelity with which they had discharged their trust, whereupon, by a final motion, the existence of the State Council of Defense passed into history.

To fight for one's country, when occasion justifies it and honor calls, may constitute the severest test of loyalty; but the battle cry is not the only expression of patriotism. For "peace hath victories no less renowned than war," and men who assume the burdens of keeping industry moving in divers sections and directions, who sense the grave responsibilities of providing for a vast army and navy, while keeping the home fires burning and the larders full, who put in long hours and sleepless nights pondering the problems of emergencies, are bound to feel the strain which often leads to shattered nerves and shortened lives. They should not be forgotten when the achievements of the nation are told or written.

In a letter addressed to the State Council of Defense, the President found time, in the midst of all his work and worries, to convey his appreciation of the good done by Utah's militant division in the great army of civilian workers, as follows:

"May I not express to the war workers of Utah my profound appreciation of the public spirit shown. In our fight for the rights of free men the world over, your efforts and the efforts of your fellow citizens are a vital factor. Your determination to perform the necessary sacrifice, and the like spirit manifest throughout our nation, reassures a stricken world that our ideals of justice and humanity and liberty shall in the end prevail."

MRS W N WILLIAMS
HEAD OF THE WOMEN'S DIVISION OF THE UTAH STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE
CHAPTER XXIII

Women in the Civilian Army

On the 3rd of August, 1917, a committee to direct the war activities of women was appointed by the Governor and included in the organization of the State Council of Defense. To secure the efficient co-operation of all women’s organizations in the state, the Chairman called a convention of the officers and representatives of the various clubs, sororal societies and religious associations, which was held October 8, 1917. It was a successful meeting and led to splendid results. The Committee on Women’s Work in the World War comprised the following well known ladies:

Mrs. W. N. Williams, Chairman; Miss Elsa Bamberger, Mrs. Edward Bichsel, Mrs. R. E. L. Collier, Mrs. E. B. Critchlow, Mrs. Thos. D. Dee, Mrs. Thos. Kearns, Mrs. J. Wm. Knight, Mrs. F. Eugene Morris, Mrs. F. S. Richards and Mrs. Union Worthington.

Each division chairman surrounded herself with able and active assistants and rendered valuable aid throughout the time of need. Under the supervision of Mrs. John A. Widtsoe, the Committee on Education divided the work on enlightenment, one branch dealing with the alien portion of the population and the other with natives whose minds had not grasped the significance of the war. The University, the several colleges of the state, the churches, public and private schools and the larger industrial plants were utilized for the dissemination of essential knowledge, and women were encouraged to talk these matters over in their homes and among their acquaintances. Considerable printed matter was received from the national capital and distributed in the counties. Foreigners were urged to attend night schools and fit themselves for the responsibilities of citizenship. One of the immediate results was the ease with which the alien population, comprising practically eighteen per cent of the whole, was handled in reference to the selective draft. There was a special committee of twenty-five energetic members who devoted themselves to this work in Salt Lake City alone, while the general organization extended to every town of importance in the state.

The Chairman of the Committee on Registration, Mrs. R. E. L. Collier, was a tireless worker, and with her associates secured splendid co-operation from the women of the whole state in voluntary service for necessary war work. In compliance with a proclamation of the Governor, registrars were stationed at all city and county polling places and 23,926 women registered for any service they might be called upon to render during the time of the war. The cards turned in represented about thirty-five different lines of work which the registrants felt capable of doing and they expressed entire willingness to act as needed. Copies of this list were filed with the Red Cross and other organizations to be drawn upon as emergencies arose.

Miss Kate Williams, Chairman of the Home and Foreign Relief Committee, and her assistants, found many opportunities to investigate and aid deserving cases among the many of every grade of merit brought to their attention. They labored in conjunction with other charitable organizations in the city and state.

To Chairman Janette A. Hyde and her Committee on Food Supply and Conservation, was assigned a very important part in the work of winning the war. They stimulated the production of food by holding contests in raising and canning vegetables, preserving fruits and saving whatever might be utilized as wholesome food. Through the Agricultural College and by the lectures and advice of home demonstrators on food values and waste, on milk, meat and cereals, the housewives of Utah were taught many useful lessons which should prove a lasting benefit to the state, aside from the advantage gained in the war. The Municipal Market and the Community Kitchen, under the direction of this committee, were models of efficiency and criterions for the future.

The Committee on General Economies, under the chairmanship of Miss Gertrude McCheyne, carried on a vigorous campaign for the saving of both food and clothing. Through demonstration classes in remodeling, cleaning and pressing clothes, four counties reported a saving of more than $10,000, and the conservation of flour and potatoes was more than twice that much. Fifty-four meetings were held throughout the state and the results were gratifying.

Chairman Charlotte Stewart, of the Health and Recreation Committee, labored in connection with the Community Camp Service, the Child Welfare and Civic Recreation Committees, the Public Playgrounds Association and the State Health Department. Recreation centers were established where women gave their services in arranging parties and entertainments for the troops, and many home dinners were served to soldiers away from their families awaiting the call to cross the sea.

The committee which looked after the welfare of women in industry, of which Mrs. F. E. Morris was chairman, helped many patriotic girls and women to secure and hold places made vacant by the enlistment of men for military service. In connection with the State Industrial Commission a beneficial supervision was maintained.

The Committee for Maintaining Existing Social Service Agencies, under Mrs. Amy B. Lyman, as chairman, was largely instrumental in recruiting two hundred nurses sent from Utah to the United States Student Nurse Reserve. An office had been opened in the Commercial Club building on the 22nd of July, 1917, and remained open with a secretary in charge until just before the close of the war. Many volunteers tendered their services and some were chosen. Had the war continued much longer this demand would have drawn heavily on every state in the Union.

The Women's Committee on Publicity, with Mrs. R. W. Spangler, Chairman, and the Committee on Child Welfare, under Chairman Miss May Anderson, acted with the regular state committees covering the same ground. The Liberty Loan Committee, whose chairman was Mrs. W. M. Ferry, comprised an original membership of nine, which became an executive board, with an advisory board of forty-five prominent women of the state. They created a sentiment of patriotic generosity in advance of every drive on bond subscriptions and were potent factors in pushing Utah over the top in each allotment. They visited women taxpayers and made women see the advantage in these investments, not only as a business proposition, but as a matter of patriotism. It would be difficult to estimate the value of their work, not only to the nation in its need, but to the state in its standing.
In no section of the country did loyal women give more freely of their time, talents and money than in Utah. They were a constant inspiration to men whose patriotism needed no spur, who were already giving so freely it would have hurt except for the pleasure of serving their country and the pride with which they viewed the magnificent work of the women beside them.
April 26, 1917. The organization of the State Council of Defense was perfected and two temporary committees were appointed—one to raise money for emergency planting and the other to determine the kind of seeds needed. Mr. J. Edward Taylor of the Agricultural College, stated that steps had already been taken by that institution to ascertain the needs of the farmers. Dr. John A. Widtsoe gave a brief explanation of the work of an existing committee on agriculture.

April 28, 1917. At the second meeting of the Council Chairman Clarence Bamberger of the Finance Committee reported that twenty-five public spirited citizens had signed a note in which each agreed to stand good for $1,000, which total had been borrowed from the State Loan Board. A telegram from Secretary of War Baker to Governor Bamberger relative to a military census was read, and Mr. Fitzgerald announced that the Governor had called a meeting of the sheriffs of the state for the purpose of putting the plan into effect. A committee, consisting of Messrs. R. W. Young, W. R. Wallace and W. W. Armstrong, was appointed to investigate the advisability of holding a state fair. The seed committee reported, through Mr. B. F. Redman that a requisition had been made upon the finance committee for $5,000 for the purchase of seed to be sold to farmers or loaned on crop mortgages. A committee of three, consisting of Messrs. P. J. Moran, R. S. Joyce and T. N. Taylor, was appointed to investigate alleged storage and hoarding of food stuffs.

May 7, 1917. A report recommending a state fair limited to agricultural and industrial exhibits only, was adopted. Mr. P. J. Moran recommended that the Governor be requested to gather data on food supply through the various state agencies, which was adopted and transmitted. Mr. B. F. Redman reported that a controversy existing between a power company and a colony of farmers, at Mosida, had been amicably settled by arranging for needed pumping power to be paid for out of crop returns, and that he had been made trustee to handle the proceeds of the acreage and settle with the company. The arrangement was duly confirmed. Several requisitions of the seed committee were allowed and the distribution report was approved. A communication was read from Mr. Julius Rosenwald, of the National Committee on Supplies, asking that the production of wool and meat be stimulated in every possible way.

May 15, 1917. The report of Mr. A. N. McKay, given in another chapter, was presented at this meeting. The rules and regulations of the Council were adopted. Messrs. C. B. Stewart and J. Edward Taylor reported that the U. S. Forestry Department had issued instructions to supervisors to stock the range to its fullest capacity, and that efforts had been made to prevent female livestock from being sold or slaughtered. The membership of committees, as listed elsewhere, was announced and confirmed. Dr. J. A. Widtsoe explained the desirability of continuing school work but alternating study with field and shop tasks. Reports were received from the seed committee to the effect that ten carloads of potatoes and fifteen tons of beans had been delivered to county agents. A communication was received from Director W. S. Gifford explaining the scope and purpose of the new draft law. By resolution offered by Col. R. W. Young the Chairman was authorized to telegraph the Utah delegation in Congress requesting early action on pending war measures.

May 23, 1917. The question of floating a Liberty Loan was discussed and plans to insure success were presented by the Finance Committee, along lines laid down by the Secretary of the Treasury, Wm. G. McAdoo, in his circular letters. A committee, consisting of Messrs. John Pingree, W. W. Armstrong and C. S. Burton, had been named by the Clearing House Association of Salt Lake City to assist in placing the allotment. As an advisory committee these gentlemen were named for Weber County: C. C. Richards, David Eccles, Joseph Scowcroft, A. P. Bigelow, Fred J. Kiesel, W. C. Zuppan, M. S. Browning, James Pingree, Patrick Healy, C. A. Wright and Joseph Eldridge. Thanks were extended for valuable assistance rendered by the following concerns: National Copper Bank, Salt Lake Stamp Company, American Theatre, F. P. Gardiner Company, Century Printing Company, Arrow Press, Williams Slide Company, Notable Feature Film Company and the Pathe Exchange. From President E. G. Peterson of the Agricultural College was received a tender of the facilities and agencies of that institution for the work of the Council. The livestock committee filed communications sent out to banks and livestock men. The purchase of buttons for men registering for conscription was authorized.

June 8, 1917. A resolution endorsing the work of the Young Men’s Christian Association was presented by Mr. Ebaugh and passed, and Mr. G. C. Bilheimer, Western District Secretary was heard. Upon motion of Mr. W. R. Wallace a committee was named to collect $10,000 for this organization. Mr. E. D. Hashimoto was quoted as saying that 3,000 Japanese laborers in Mexico were available for farm labor in this country if they could be admitted. Mr. J. Edward Taylor was appointed State Director for the Boys’ Working Reserve. Reports were received from the Seeds Committee and the Food Supply Committee, and the general use of “pressure cookers” was advocated by President Peterson. The Committee on Military Affairs, Major W. G. Williams, Col. R. W. Young and Dean W. H. Leary, recommended that “all mayors, city councils and every business in the different cities and town of the state be asked to lend their efforts in helping the military officials to secure enlistments.”

June 26, 1917. A report was made by the committee appointed to raise funds for the Y. M. C. A. The chairman announced that a mass meeting had been called for June 26th, to be held at the Salt Lake Theatre in the interest of the National Guard. Mr. J. Edward Taylor reported that a carload of “pressure cookers” had been ordered through the Consolidated Wagon and Machine Company. A communication from Mr. Wm. G. Roylance, of Provo, concerning the shipping and marketing of food supplies, especially fruits, was referred to President Peterson. A letter was received from Director Gifford announcing the proposed visit of Dr. Carl Vrooman on the 14th of July. A statement was received concerning the Boys’ Working Reserve, giving requirements, accommodations and wages for boys so employed. It was reported that the Boy Scouts and similar organizations were aiding in recruiting for this force. Mr. Clarence Bamberger reported that Utah had oversubscribed the Liberty Loan allotment fifty per cent. At his own suggestion, Mr. B. F. Redman was authorized to confer with the proper officials as to some method to compel men to work or leave the state. By resolution the Council petitioned the Department of Labor to have restrictions on labor removed during the war. An estimate of crop prospects was submitted by Dr. Ebaugh, and a statement that, besides the 268,954,500 pounds of sugar expected there were 1,128,000 pounds in storage.

July 20, 1917. Major W. G. Williams reported that all military units of the state were recruited to full strength. Upon request of Mr. B. F. Redman a registration of all unemployed men between 18 and 50 years of age was ordered. The chairman reported that $9,000 had been collected for the Y. W. C. A. but that the Ogden committeeman had written, "I beg to advise that I don't think you are going to get any money for the Y. M. C. A. here, as we do not feel like diverting it from the Red Cross." Although the chairman made another appeal, the response was that "so far as Ogden is concerned there is no disposition to attempt this work at the present time." The collection of a regimental mess fund for the National Guard of Utah was authorized.

August 23, 1917. Dr. Peterson reported slow sales on "pressure cookers." Chairman Moran announced that the unemployed men in and around Salt Lake City were inefficient or too old to work, and stated his belief that the expense of such registration would be money wasted. Messrs. Widtsoe, Wallace and Taylor were authorized to formulate a letter to students urging them to keep on with their school attendance. Mr. Clarence Bamberger explained the need of an additional fund as the original $25,000 had been depleted. Authorization was given to secure a like amount in the same manner. By resolution the Council requested the Governor to have a military survey made of the state. Mr. B. F. Redman reported that the storage committee had made a campaign among the farmers to secure additional storage facilities for potatoes. The Second Liberty Loan was announced by Clarence Bamberger, and Chairman Herbert S. Auerbach of the Defense Committee requested co-operation in the betterment of state highways.
Announcement was received of the appointment of Mr. W. W. Armstrong as Federal Food Administrator. As chairman of the committee on local activities Mr. Armstrong reported that each county had been organized on the plan of the State Council. A committee, comprising Messrs. C. C. Richards, W. R. Wallace and W. W. Armstrong, was appointed to draft resolutions expressing appreciation of the services of Col. R. W. Young and Mr. Ben U. Siegel, who had resigned from the council to enter the military service. Mr. J. H. Lamont asked that cases be investigated where men claimed exemption because of financial obligations. On motion of Mr. W. R. Wallace the council agreed to find employment for the dependents of men who had entered the military service.

September 12, 1917. It was announced that the Y. M. C. A. fund had been completed. Mr. W. R. Wallace was elected vice-chairman in place of Col. R. W. Young, resigned. Mrs. Janette A. Hyde reported the distribution of 75,000 "Hoover Cards" through the state. Mr. George T. Odell reported that the sale of "pressure cookers" needed stimulation, and the matter was referred to the food committee. Mr. J. Y. Jensen requested action to secure a larger number of sheep grazing permits in the Manti Forest Reserve, and the livestock committee was authorized to take the matter up.

October 1, 1917. Vice Chairman W. R. Wallace presiding, reported that 100,000 fruit boxes had been obtained through Mr. W. C. Geddes of Ogden, to facilitate shipments. Mr. B. F. Redman reported plans for a military parade October 5th, and Major W. G. Williams stated that the troops from Fort Douglas would take part. It was decided that all cases of dependency be referred to the local Red Cross headquarters. Announcement was received of the appointment of Mr. W. W. Armstrong as Federal Fuel Administrator.

November 20, 1917. Chairman Joy H. Johnson and Miss Kate Williams of the local Red Cross, and Mr. John W. Morey, Manager for the Mountain Division, explained the plan of the organization in relief work among families of men absent in the camps. A campaign was announced for raising a fund of $100,000 for war relief work. Governor J. C. Gunther, of Colorado, addressed the Council on the work in hand. Mr. Clarence Bamberger reported progress on the Second Liberty Loan. Mr. B. F. Redman reported that, of the $31,000 advanced farmers, $25,000 had been repaid and the balance was secured by mortgages. Mr. F. C. Richmond reported observations of the state protection committee. The secretary reported a successful parade, and a mammoth meeting in the tabernacle on October 5th, which had been addressed by Secretary Lane of the Cabinet.

December 18, 1917. Reports were made showing an excess in the soldiers’ welfare fund, and a distribution of amounts was ordered. A communication was read from Director Gifford relative to the employment exchange plan of the Labor Department. A letter from the peace league was read and filed.

February 2, 1918. Resignations were received from Mr. Clarence Bamberger and Mr. C. E. Groesbeck, who were leaving for military assignments. Messrs. Geo. H. Dern and S. R. Inch were named in their stead. It was announced that Mr. Heber J. Grant had been named Chairman of the Finance Committee and a member of the Executive Committee; that Mr. Inch was made Chairman of the Transportation Committee and Mr. Dern had been named on the Finance Committee. A telegram was received from Chairman Farnsworth, then at Del Monte, California, suggesting Mrs. Mont Ferry, two ladies from Ogden, one from Logan and one from Provo, on the Council. It was announced that the Governor had, on the 25th of January, appointed ten ladies as members of the Council. Mr. J. Will Knight reported that the employment exchange committee’s work could best be done by Mr. C. C. Clise, representing the Federal government, and Mr. D. A. Plumley, Immigration Inspector, after whose survey of the available workmen of the state, employment offices would be opened in Salt Lake City and Ogden. The appointment of Mr. W. F. Jensen as Chairman of the Committee on Commercial Economies was announced by the Governor. A special committee, consisting of Messrs. John M. Hayes, W. W. Armstrong, J. A. Widtsoe and T. S. Browning, was named to consider raising funds for the Salvation Army. Mr. F. C. Richmond reported a contract for three thousand feet of films showing life at Camps Kearney and Lewis, which was approved. He also reported that the fund for state protection had not been used and that, as conditions in the state were clearing up, it could be diverted for other purposes.

March 9, 1918. A report of council activities was read by the secretary and ordered printed. Announcement was made of the Third Liberty Loan. It was stated that 2,500 recruits for the shipyards had been obtained, although the state quota was but 1,600 men. Chairman Farnsworth was invited by wire to a conference at Washington.

April 13, 1918. The report of Chairman Farnsworth on his return from the Washington conference is given under a separate heading. A successful mass meeting in the tabernacle on the 6th of April, with Mr. Will H. Hayes, as speaker, was reported.

May 11, 1918. The annual statement of the secretary and treasurer, showing collections and remittances, was read and approved. Commissioner Jensen presented a report of economies, a synopsis of which is given elsewhere in this volume. A telegram from President Wilson was read and filed. Mr. P. J. Moran reported that 2,250 men had registered for ship building and that others had probably gone direct to the yards. Dr. R. S. Joyce reported that seventy-four men were enrolled in the Medical Corps and thirty more were needed. Mr. A. N. McKay reported concerning the work of the draft board. Mr. Geo. T. Odell gave an account of a conference held at Omaha with reference to the sale of War Savings Stamps.

June 15, 1918. Captain J. M. DeBeaufort, of the Belgian Army, addressed the council. The allotment of sums to the various funds was discussed and directed. On motion of Mr. Geo. T. Odell, the President's Proclamation was emphasized for the observance of June 28th as a day for services and solicitations in the War Savings campaign; and all committees were asked to solemnly urge the people of Utah to pledge themselves "to purchase War Savings Stamps to the limit of our ability, to the end that the war may be won in the only proper manner—a crushing defeat of the Germans." The Woman's Committee presented a demand for national prohibition.

July 18, 1918. Executive committee reports were read and filed. The resignation of Secretary Ebaugh was accepted. A resolution was adopted authorizing the raising of funds to aid the University in training soldiers. The regulation of gasoline sales was declared as follows: Closing on week days at 7:00 p. m., excepting Saturdays and days preceding holidays, when sales end at 9:00 p. m. On Sundays and holidays, sales are allowed only between the hours of 7:00 and 10:00 a. m. Drug stores and soft drink parlors ordered closed at 10:00 p. m.

August 28, 1918. Executive committee reports were presented, showing that $40,000 each to the University and the Agricultural College had been guaranteed; that $15,500 had been raised as a regimental fund for the 145th Field Artillery, and that a motor transport company had been organized to aid in the handling of crops. Regulations for Christmas shopping were adopted, laying stress on useful gifts and buying early.

September 20, 1918. A hearing was held concerning the advisability of building the new Pantages Theatre under the priorities ruling. At the conclusion a vote was taken and seventeen out of twenty-four favored completion of the structure. Chairman Farnsworth stated that he had "opposed the erection of the Pantages building from the beginning and still considered it as unnecessary."

June 26, 1919. After the war was over the Council held one meeting, submitted a final report to the Governor, authorized a committee to wind up the affairs of the organization, and adjourned sine die.
CHAPTER XXV

The Federal Food Commission

Within two months after the declaration of war extreme measures were found necessary to prevent the exportation of food products and basic supplies. Under the Espionage Law of June 15th, 1917, a proclamation was issued naming July 15th, 1917, as the date after which no more coal, coke, oils, food grains, flour or meal, fodder or feeds, meats or fats, iron, steel or structural material of any kind, fertilizers, arms, ammunition or explosives could be sent out of the country without an export license. This restriction applied chiefly to neutral countries, as licenses were granted when the product was consigned to the Allies.

By the middle of July an increase of a billion bushels of food-crops, over the previous year, was assured. This was the first response of the American farmers to the President's warning that "on them would rest the issue of the war and the fate of the nation." In order to further stimulate production and to conserve results a Federal Food Commission was created with Herbert C. Hoover at its head. This gentleman was an engineer and a business man of world-wide reputation, who had demonstrated exceptional executive ability in handling the difficult work of relief in Belgium at the beginning of the war. His first official move was an appeal to the housewives, chefs and caterers of the country, printed on a neat card to be conspicuously displayed in all kitchens. It was headed "Win the War by Giving Your Own Daily Service," and read as follows:

"Save the Wheat. One wheatless meal a day. Use corn, oatmeal, rye, or barley bread and non-wheat breakfast foods. Order bread twenty-four hours in advance so your baker will not bake beyond his needs. Cut the loaf on the table and only as required. Use stale bread for cooking, toast, etc. Eat less cake and pastry.

"Save the Meat. Beef, mutton, or pork not more than once daily. Use freely vegetables and fish. At the meat meal serve smaller portions and stew instead of steaks. Make made-dishes of all left-overs. Do this and there will be meat enough for every one at a reasonable price."
"Save the Milk. The children must have milk. Use every drop. Use buttermilk and sour milk for cooking and making cottage cheese. Use less cream.

"Save the Fats. We are the world's greatest fat wasters: fat is food. Butter is essential for the growth and health of children. Use butter on the table as usual, but not for cooking. Other fats are as good. Reduce use of fried foods. Soap contains fats. Do not waste it. Make your own washing soap at home out of saved fats.

"Save the Sugar. Sugar is scarcer. We use today three times as much per person as our allies. So there may be enough for all at reasonable prices, use less candy and sweet drinks. Do not stint sugar in putting up fruit and jams. They will save butter.

"Save the Fuel. Coal comes from a distance and our railways are overburdened hauling war material. Help relieve them by burning fewer fires. Use wood when you can get it.

"Use the Perishable Foods. Fruits and vegetables we have in abundance. As a nation we eat too little green stuffs. Double their use and improve your health. Store potatoes and other roots properly and they will keep. Begin now to can or dry all surplus garden products.

"Use local supplies. Patronize your local producer. Distance means money. Buy perishable food from the neighborhood nearest you and thus save transportation.

"General Rules. Buy less, serve smaller portions. Preach the 'Gospel of the Clean Plate'. Don't eat a fourth meal. Don't limit the plain food of growing children. Watch out for the wastes in the community. Full garbage pails in America mean empty dinner pails in America and Europe. If the more fortunate of our people will avoid waste and eat no more than they need, the high cost of living problem of the less fortunate will be solved."

Having cautioned the American consumer to be saving of available food Mr. Hoover began a vigorous campaign for increased production. Before the creation of the Food Administration the President's call to service in "the great civilian army" had gone to the several State Councils of Defense, which began their labors without a moment of hesitation, so the acreage of wheat and rye had already been increased almost thirty per cent over the preceding year. A hundred thousand school boys above the age of sixteen were released from high schools with full credits for the year on condition that they would enter some employment, on farms or otherwise, which would increase the food supply of the nation. In large cities the electric lines carried these boys free of charge to and from the truck farms where they worked. Proclamations were issued in many states calling on the people to utilize every available square foot of ground. Hundreds of thousands of backyards and vacant lots were converted into vegetable gardens. Many private parks were plowed up on big estates and planted to beans and corn. The Federal Farm Loan Board put out $200,000,000 at a reasonable rate to stimulate production. Many large manufacturing plants released their employees for farm work, paying them the difference between farm and factory wages. The Grain Savers' League was organized to curtail the use of grain for making alcoholic beverages, which furnished both a nucleus and an excuse for national prohibition.

On the 1st of July, 1917, Senator W. W. Armstrong was appointed Federal Food Administrator for the State of Utah. In a splendid resume of the work of this important branch of public service compiled by Mrs. Wynn Coman Schramm, she pays this merited tribute to the local organization:

"Through all the uncertainties of constantly changing war conditions, and consequent changing Food Administration activities, Mr. Armstrong has held a firm hand on the rudder of the local administration. He constantly impressed his staff of volunteers with the necessity of putting all possible spiritual appeal into food work, and with the idea that, as high privates in the big food army at home, they, along with the boys in khaki, were also fighting the battle for democracy. In his contact with business concerns which necessarily found food regulations of much moment to their activities, he has displayed the utmost fairness. Even when food regulations have hit hard practical economic conditions in Utah, he has sought to maintain the idea that we asked no favors at the allied family table, but were willing to face the situation just as the boys at the front were facing the enemy shells. In the appointment of his staff he sought to gather around him workers efficient in their various lines of activities, not only from all institutions concerned, but from the people of the state."
The personnel of the organization was as follows: W. W. Armstrong, Federal Food Administrator; John K. Hardy, Executive Secretary; Gilbert W. Williams, Assistant Secretary; Mrs. F. C. Schramm, Director of Public Information; P. M. MacGregor, Regulations and Licenses; J. Edward Taylor, Chief of Production Division; M. H. Green, Director of Threshing Division; Ralph Steward, Threshermen's Assistant; H. C. Legg, Threshing Machine Inspector; Dr. John A. Widtsoe, Chairman of Irrigation Committee with O. W. Israelson and Richard R. Lyman as members; James M. Kirkham, Special Field Representative; Oscar A. Kirkham, Small Acreage Director; Walter C. Lewis, State Merchants' Representative; George W. Morgan and Geo. O. Relf, State Hotel Committee; B. F. Redman, Chairman of Seed Committee; A. E. Hubbard, Director of Outdoor Advertising; Dr. E. G. Peterson, Director of Sugar Production; W. F. Jensen, Chairman of Committee on Crops and Markets; D. C. Richards, Inspector of Perishable Products; Miss Gertrude McCheyne, Home Economics Director; Miss Joanna H. Sprague, Library Publicity Director; Miss Lucy Van Cott, State Leader for College Women; and Mrs. Lucile U. Reid, Chairman of Housewives’ Vigilance Committee. A glance at the list shows that the Administrator was a good judge of human nature and of the needs of the occasion. Not only were they men and women of the highest standing but people who knew how and were willing to work.

The County Food Administrators were selected with the same care and discrimination. With the counties they represented their names are as follows:

Beaver .................................. R. H. Strickland
Box Elder ................................ Wynn L. Eddy
Cache ................................... E. R. Owen
Carbon .................................. A. W. Horsley
Davis .................................... H. H. Blood
Daggett .................................. M. N. Larsen
Duchesne ................................ Paul Billings
Emery .................................... Henry Thompson
Grand .................................... D. E. Baldwin
Garfield ................................ James Houston
Iron ..................................... Wilford Day
Juab ..................................... W. G. Orme
Kane ..................................... W. W. Seegmiller
Millard .................................. D. F. Peterson
Morgan ................................... Daniel Heiner
Pinte .................................... Thomas Black
Rich .................................... S. R. South
These were men and women of action and ability. They traveled over their respective counties, held meetings and carefully supervised the observance of food regulations, and they did it all at their own expense. One of their heaviest responsibilities was the apportionment of sugar among consumers, in which special certificates were issued by thousands and an equitable distribution was made among merchants. They encouraged production of the several kinds of foods and feed-stuffs and gave wholesouled assistance to the different representatives of the State Food Administration as they made their rounds of education and inspection. Weber County had two local administrators because of its population and Salt Lake City one in addition to the county member, both of whom were women whose efforts were tireless, tactful and successful.

With limited powers under the congressional act designed to meet the food situation, but with grim determination and the backing of the President, Mr. Hoover put his whole energy into the work. In Utah he could have found no better man for the emergency than the one selected. Since necessity was the basic law, it called for sound judgment and indomitable courage, tempered with broad sympathy, to enforce and popularize its requirements.

Among the many problems presented was that of hoarding. This tendency, which could be regarded as a virtue, or at least as an evidence of thrift in normal times, was a menace in time of war. Its logical result would be exorbitant prices, financial injury to consumers and eventual want or starvation for the poor. Here in Utah, with the lessons of ancient Israel to draw from, the experience of early days to remember and the teachings of their leaders before them, the most natural thing for the people to do was to save an abundance against the day of need. But they sensed the difficulty at once and, as a rule, complied with all requests and regulations and assisted in their enforcement. There were exceptions, of course, but the vigilance and co-operation of the public enabled the Food Administrator to bring them to book.

Enforcement of sugar restrictions was another task which the Food Administration had to approach with consummate discretion. Utah was a producer of sugar and the people always had been urged to use it freely and taught that its consumption was an incentive to local industry. Moreover, the canning season was approaching and no Utah household is deemed ready for winter unless it has a cellar full of jellies, preserves and canned fruits. Yet the general public accepted the deprivation good-naturedly and people who had always bought sugar by the sack reconciled themselves to asking for permits and buying by the pound.

The reason for these innovations had to be explained, of course, and this was the work of the Educational and Publicity Divisions of the Food Administration. These were combined under the capable direction of Mrs. F. C. Schramm, who never shirked a responsibility nor hesitated over a task that fell to her section. As three-fourths of the work was done through explanations and appeals it may be understood that the Federal Food Administrator for Utah learned to value his Educational Director when it came to the dissemination of his arguments. She kept in close touch with the newspapers of the state and received their full co-operation. The Housewives’ Vigilance League was a local institution originating in the Utah Educational Division. It sent cards to thousands of women whom it enlisted as members and called upon in distributing literature relating to the production and conservation of food. When the war was over this league kept up the plan of saving for the suffering populations of war stricken lands.

The Educational Division comprised the following ladies: Miss Lillian B. Connelly, Assistant Director; Miss Gertrude McCheyne, Mrs. Rose Homer Widtsoe, Miss Joanna Sprague, Miss Leah P. Jennings, Miss Jean Cox, Miss Zina Watson and Miss Lucy VanCott; and the following gentlemen: Mr. Walter C. Lewis, and Mr. A. E. Hubbard. In her final report Mrs. Schramm acknowledged the whole-hearted support of Mrs. Janette A. Hyde, State Chairman of Conservation in the Women’s Division of the State Council of Defense, through whose efforts and the aid of the Latter Day Saints Relief Society, 85,250 pledge cards were distributed and largely signed before any other state had been organized for conservation work.

It may not be necessary to enter into all the details of the campaign for the production and saving of food. But no true record, however condensed, could omit to mention the meatless days and the wheatless days that drifted fast to eatless days, as we saved like we gave—until it hurt. There were occasional infractions of the rules and consequent investigations over which the Administrator presided, and judgments were rendered and fines levied and collected and turned over to the Red Cross. In time the lavish use of sugar in tea, of flour in bread, of butter and meat, was discouraged and the olden virtue of saving was recognized as the newer crime of hoarding. But it helped to win the war and to keep alive millions of famished people who were starving and begging for the daily wastage of our accustomed ways.

Increased production needed no urging among the industrious people of the Beehive State, but in many instances it required assistance in loans or labor. The Production Division, under Director J. Edward Taylor, inaugurated campaigns for raising hogs and poultry, and enlarging the acreage of wheat, corn and sugar beets. As a result the planting of sugar beets alone advanced twenty-five per cent; the area in wheat had been materially enlarged and war gardens were cultivated from one end of the state to the other; the increase in hogs was over one hundred and twenty per cent, the highest in the country, and in poultry one hundred and six per cent over any previous year.

At all times the Federal Food Administration worked in complete harmony with the State Council of Defense, Mr. Armstrong being a member of the Council and in close and constant touch with Chairman Farnsworth. There were many matters that arose in which both organizations, their heads and memberships, felt equal responsibility. When it came to a dispute over water privileges they sent J. Edward Taylor out to see the farmers and B. F. Redman to arrange with the owners of the water. Then the dove of peace was seen to poise on snowy wings and hover above the growing crops apparently oblivious to the fact that they were intended for war purposes.
CHAPTER XXVI
The Federal Fuel Administration

The United States government, after entering the war, was vitally interested in knowing what portion of its exports, particularly coal, was being resold by neutral customers to the Central Powers. An embargo was placed on bunker coal which enemy sea raiders might obtain in friendly ports, or forcibly take from the neutrals of northern Europe whose coast cities were in constant danger of attack from the Kaiser's fleet in the Baltic Sea. In line with this action came a general supervision and control of the fuel supply of the nation, which resulted in the creation of a Federal Fuel Administration with Dr. H. A. Garfield as National Director.

On the 3rd of October, 1917, the several State Fuel Administrations were organized with W. W. Armstrong as Administrator for Utah, Mr. Ledyard M. Bailey, a well known resident of Salt Lake City, was appointed Executive Secretary, with George H. Dern for the state, and Church P. Castle for the city, constituting an Advisory Committee. Mrs. F. C. Schramm was named as Publicity Director, with Miss Lillian Connelly as her assistant. The county Fuel Administrators, selected by Mr. Armstrong were as follows:

Beaver ....................... Chesley Barton
Box Elder .................... R. L. Fishburn
Cache ......................... Weston Vernon
Carbon ........................ Neil Madsen
Davis ........................ Leo J. Muir
Emery ........................ Henry Thompson
Garfield ........................ Mrs. C. Garhart
Grand ........................ F. W. Strong
Iron .......................... Edmund H. Ryan
Juab .......................... G. M. Whitmore
Kane .......................... John R. Findlay
Millard ........................ Mahonri M. Steel
Morgan ........................ C. M. Croft
Piute ........................ Benjamin Cameron, Jr.
Rich .......................... John Kennedy
Salt Lake ........................ Sam Lindsay
San Juan ........................ O. W. McConkie
Sanpete ........................ Halbert S. Kerr
Sevier ........................ Martin C. Christensen
A conference of the Fuel Administrations of Utah, Idaho, Washington, Oregon, California and Nevada, called at the urgent request of Administrator Armstrong, met in Salt Lake City, October 19, 1917. He explained that the handling of coal was an interstate matter which could not be regulated by State Administrators working separately, and he urged the establishment of a District Car Service Bureau to equalize, harmonize and control the coal traffic between Utah and Wyoming railroad coal mines and points of distribution. The advantage of this was evident and the bureau was created with J. S. Spelman, Division Superintendent of the Western Pacific Railway as Director, and the organization was completed with Chief Clerk H. S. Stone, Statistician E. J. Hilton, the necessary office force and traveling inspectors. During the following month a branch bureau was opened in San Francisco. On the 10th of November, Mr. Armstrong was named by Dr. Garfield as the Supervising Administrator for the states of Washington, Oregon, California, Nevada, Idaho and Utah.

Immediate improvement in traffic conditions was noticeable in speeding up the car movement and eliminating congestion of cars in mine yards and on side tracks, so that the needs of the government were no longer impeded by local demands or delays. A complete house to house canvas was conducted at the same time in Salt Lake City and in other cities of the State to ascertain and list stocks on hand, urgent requirements and other facts bearing on the use of coal. In this painstaking personal inquiry the Fuel Administration was aided very materially by the various organizations of the Mormon Church, which never failed to place its efficient machinery at the disposal of the federal government when called upon for assistance.

Dr. Garfield gave the Utah Federal Fuel Administrator special authority to direct and control the distribution of emergency carload shipments of the six states represented at the conference of October 19th. With the co-operation of the Utah and Wyoming producers, and the functioning of the Car Service Bureau, all emergency requests from the several State Administrators were promptly met and the distress in Idaho, Nevada, Oregon and Northern California was rapidly relieved so that the production, distribution and supply were normal by the end of the year.

Trade practices and retailers' margins were investigated and regulated as far as was practicable, but all efforts of the Fuel Administrator to establish a central distributing agency in Salt Lake City intended to effect a net saving to consumers of forty cents a ton, were futile, as the local dealers could not seem to agree on a practical plan of operation. In December, 1917, a special hearing was held at the Commercial Club on the petition of Utah producers for an increase in mine prices. A copy of the testimony and arguments, with the recommendation of the Administrator, were sent to Washington, but the application was finally rejected.

Director Garfield sent Walter E. Hope, of the national headquarters, to Salt Lake City in May, 1918, where, on the invitation of Mr. Armstrong, the Administrators of Wyoming, Nevada, California, Oregon and Washington assembled to discuss developments in the production and distribution of coal. Soon after this a large shipment of Utah coal was sent to Honolulu. In June Messrs. Morrow and Calloway of the Washington City office conferred with Utah and Wyoming producers in Salt Lake City and Mr. Moroni Heiner was appointed District Representative of the mine operators, with whom or with his assistants, A. D. Pierson and D. H. Pope, the different State Administrators could deal directly.

Orders were issued regulating the coal traffic, certificates of registration were required, screening at the yards was prohibited, car load shipments were discontinued except to regular dealers, instructions were issued to consumers, rules were promulgated for saving heat in rooms and offices, a shovel tag day was observed in the schools, a state-wide storage campaign was carried out in the spring of 1918, and a skip-stop schedule was adopted for conservation of energy in the operation of street cars.

On the 30th of November, following the signing of the armistice, the office organization of the Fuel Administration was disbanded and all files, records and properties were turned over to a representative of the federal government. The service had been useful, the results were satisfactory in the main, and Utah had taken a conspicuous leadership among the northwestern states in the adjustment of all complications, with Salt Lake City as the meeting place for the northwestern conferences.
CHAPTER XXVII

Achievements of the War for Democracy

An epidemic of pneumonia, superinduced by influenza brought from Europe in the fall of 1917, caused more fatalities among our troops than did the bullets of the enemy. Those who died in this way were buried with the honors that pertain to military funerals. This is one of the secrets of our national greatness. He who perished at his post in the discharge of his duty was accorded his dues. Whether he fell in a desperate charge, or was shot as he patrolled a lonely outpost, or died of pneumonia in the armed camp, he was a hero none the less, for he served his country where it placed him and gave it all he had to give—his life.

Probably England never had a greater hero than the poor ignorant jack tar once captured by the Chinese and offered his freedom if he would prostrate himself before a mandarin. He refused, was knocked on the head and his body flung upon a dung heap, but the spirit shown by that loyal Briton makes the greatness and the glory of the British empire today.

Such was the spirit displayed by the men who went to the training camps and battlefields for us. They were prepared to meet death in any form or at any time for the sake of their flag and what it represented. Wherever they fell, and however they died in the observance of their obligations, they were honored whether they wore the modest uniforms of privates or the insignia of those in command. The World War was fought for a realization of the dreams of democracy.

Out of that crash of kingdoms came the touching ceremony of paying honor to "the unknown soldier". On the anniversary of peace a British private, one of the many unidentified dead, was reinterred in Westminster Abbey to lie among the great of past and future centuries. At the same time one of Verdun's nameless heroes was taken to Paris and reburied with pomp and splendor where his grave may ever be a hallowed spot for patriots to visit. Here in America, with appropriate orations and exercises, we laid an unknown soldier to rest in the consecrated soil of Arlington. Nothing could be more symbolic of the war waged for democracy throughout the world.

The unknown soldier typifies the cause for which we entered the war, the spirit which led the Allies on to victory, the future benefactions gained for sacrifices made. He went to the battleground from every land and race—he was the Pole or Alsatian who crossed the border to rebuke tyranny; he was the volunteer Greek or Czech who gave a hand to humanity; he was the venturesome Hindoo who followed his star of destiny to France; the dusky African or the American Indian who took his place in the long line; the neighbor who went to Canada and enlisted before we entered the war; the unnamed soldier of fortune, or perhaps a victim of misfortune who died in a last effort to retrieve his name and usefulness. He was the average fighting man, the common soldier who gave his life to make the world a safer place for plain people like himself. Honored as representatives of all the countless heroes whom death deprived of rank and title, these unknown soldiers lie among the marble mausoleums of history and their tombs are shrines of democracy embowered each year in the floral tributes of grateful humanity.

What was achieved for democracy to compensate for all the sacrifices made? Only the future may answer that question truthfully. We are too close to the losses and too far from the ultimate gains to speak wisely. It will take many years to erase the sorrow and forget the bitterness; it will take generations to adjust the moral and social balances upset by the wholesale slaughter of men; it may take centuries to discharge the financial obligations incurred. But three of the strongest fortresses of military despotism—Germany, Austria and Russia—were leveled, and the gates of many king-ridden principalities were opened to popular government. During the course of the war and the subsequent negotiations the following rulers abdicated their thrones:

Khedive of Egypt, November 16, 1914.
Czar of Russia, March 17, 1917.
King of Greece, August 28, 1917.
King Ferdinand, Bulgaria, August 12, 1918.
King Boris, Bulgaria, November 3, 1918.
Kaiser William, November 9, 1918.

These were the kingdoms and dukedoms of royalty where hereditary despots of mediocre ability, or profligate habits, ruled the people according to whim, answerable only to the kaisers at the head of their federations. Twenty-one were carried down with the collapse of the reigning houses of Hohenzollern and Hapsburg. The change was immediately noticeable not only among the people but on street signs as well. The “Kaiser Kaffee” in Berlin became the “Kaffee”, the "Kaiser’s Confectioner", became everybody’s candy maker, and pictures of his departed majesty which had once been as indispensable to public places as were chairs and cuspidors, now shared with these their uses. For the power and the reverence had faded together.

Germany and Austria paid enormous tolls for traveling the path of glory. Once prosperous and united empires they are now distraught, disarmed and dismembered. But yesterday the word of either kaiser “might have stood against the world”, and now none is servile enough to show him deference. A new manhood has come to life amid the ruins of royalty, to be nurtured to sane maturity in the arms of adversity, but its heritage is freedom, a priceless gift bestowed by defeat.
It was a staggering price, as all who paid on either side, or saw the payment made, well know; but in the larger view which contemplates the rights and opportunities of millions yet unborn, of ages yet to come, the cost was small and evanescent. Out of the lion’s mouth came honey; out of the evil of conflict came benefits that mankind might never have obtained through any other medium or in any other way.
CHAPTER XXVIII

The Foundation Stones of Peace

The fourteen points submitted by President Wilson as the ground work upon which to build the peace treaty are as follows:

I. Open covenants of peace, openly arrived at, after which there shall be no private international understandings of any kind, but diplomacy shall proceed always frankly and in the public view.

II. Absolute freedom of navigation upon the seas, outside territorial waters, alike in peace and in war, except as the seas may be closed in whole or in part by international action for the enforcement of international conventions.

III. The removal, so far as possible, of all economic barriers and the establishment of an equality of trade conditions among all the nations consenting to the peace and associating themselves for its maintenance.

IV. Adequate guaranties given and taken that national armaments will be reduced to the lowest points consistent with domestic safety.

V. A free, open-minded, and absolutely impartial adjustment of all colonial claims, based upon a strict observance of the principle that in determining all such questions of sovereignty the interest of the populations concerned must have equal weight with the equitable claims of the government whose title is to be determined.

VI. The evacuation of all Russian territory and such a settlement of all questions affecting Russia as will secure the best and freest co-operation of the other nations of the world in obtaining for her an unhampered and unembarrassed opportunity for the independent determination of her own political development and national policy, and assure her of a sincere welcome into the society of free nations under institutions of her own choosing; also to extend assistance of every kind she may need. The treatment accorded Russia by her sister nations in the months to come will be the acid test of their good will, of their comprehension of her needs as distinguished from their own interests, and of their intelligent and unselfish sympathy.

VII. Belgium must be evacuated and restored without any attempt to limit the sovereignty which she enjoys in common with all other free nations. No single act will serve better to restore confidence in the laws which have been set up for the government of their relations with one another.

VIII. All French territory should be freed and the invaded portions restored; the wrong done to France by Prussia in 1871 in the matter of Alsace-Lorraine, which has unsettled the peace of the world for nearly fifty years, should be righted in order that peace may once more be made secure in the interest of all.

IX. A readjustment of the frontiers of Italy should be effected along clearly recognizable lines of nationality.

X. The peoples of Austria-Hungary, whose place among the nations we wish to see safeguarded and assured, should be accorded the freest opportunity of autonomous development.

XI. Rumania, Serbia, and Montenegro should be evacuated; occupied territories restored; Serbia accorded free and secure access to the sea; and the relations of the several Balkan states to one another determined by friendly counsel along historically established lines of allegiance and nationality; and international guaranties of the political and economic independence and territorial integrity of the several Balkan states should be entered into.

XII. The Turkish portions of the present Ottoman Empire should be assured a secure sovereignty, but the other nationalities which are now under Turkish rule should be assured an undoubted security of life and an absolutely unmolested opportunity of autonomous development, and the Dardanelles should be permanently opened as a free passage to the ships and commerce of all nations under international guaranties.

XIII. An independent Polish state should be erected which should include territories inhabited by indisputably Polish populations, which should be assured a free and secure access to the sea, and whose political and economic independence and territorial integrity should be guaranteed by international covenant.

XIV. A general association of nations must be formed under specific covenants for the purpose of affording mutual guaranties of political independence and territorial integrity to great and small states alike.
CHAPTER XXIX

Return of the Veterans

Before the United States entered the war some 16,000 of our fellow citizens had already enlisted in Canada. Many were distributed among Canadian units, but there was one regiment composed solely of men from the states, called the "American Legion." From the last private to the highest officer they were free lances, actuated in part by motives of adventure but mainly through sympathy for the cause of democracy. After war was declared by the United States, volunteers flocked to the different branches of service more rapidly than they could be examined and assigned. The regular army, which had only 107,641 men, was soon increased to 223,000. Nearly 5,000 young men of education and character entered the training camps for reserve officers. Those who enlisted as aviators were put to work building and repairing machines. Engineers were employed in the construction of cantonments all over the country. These volunteers had taken the oath and begun their labors before the public was fully awakened. Then the selective draft was made operative and men were accepted, equipped, assigned and drilled by hundreds of thousands.

Everywhere the utmost enthusiasm prevailed. Civil activities were blended with those of military preparation wherever practicable. Men relinquished positions, sacrificed business opportunities, turned their backs on accustomed luxuries and went where their country sent them. The general public insisted on taking part in the military demonstration. Inducted men were entertained at parties and banquets while they waited for orders, and bands accompanied them to the stations when they left. At every concentration camp society people vied with each other in showing men in uniform a good time as they came and went. Nothing was too rich for the American soldier.

The President and the War Department shared with the masses this consideration for the men in uniform. No army or navy was ever surrounded with such comforts and precautions. They were the best equipped soldiers and sailors the world had ever seen. They were the best fed and the best clad of all who took part in the war. They were safeguarded from improper influences and protected from disease as carefully as if they had been sent to boarding schools. They were provided with amusements, lionized between their tasks and treated as guests of honor wherever they went. Their lives were insured by the government at a nominal cost and allotments were handled by millions for dependent relatives. There was nothing left undone which might enhance the comfort and relieve the minds of America's fighting men.

Not all were able to go across but all were ready and willing. Not all had opportunities to do heroic deeds, but none was found wanting when the test came. Those who reached Europe considered themselves the favored ones. The war did not continue long enough to give every one the chance he craved. But all were regarded as heroes who made the offer even when spared the risk. There is a democracy in courage and a courage in democracy which obliterate rank and title. It is a quality beyond the power of authority to create, above the reach of wealth to buy. It is found in every walk of life, in every town, on every farm, in the mansions of the rich, in the hovels of the poor, in the churches and in the slums of the cities. Whatever difference was discernible before, they all looked alike in khakai and were hailed as heroes whom a proud people delighted to honor.

After the war was over, and peace had been declared, and a procession of ships had brought back those who survived the perils of camp and battle, there were such outpourings of joy, such enthusiastic greetings, such magnificent receptions, such rousing welcomes at every debarkation that returning warriors felt they had won a permanent place in the great American heart. With their less fortunate comrades of the waiting camps they were mustered out as rapidly as possible and furnished transportation to their several homes. Then every community had its celebration and almost every family a reunion. With fond eyes, quickened pulses and thankful hearts, we saw them coming, but scarcely knew them. The beardless, careless, laughing boys we had sent away with our prayers not quite two years before came back bronzed and bearded men, experienced soldiers and sailors, veterans and heroes of the bloodiest war in which men ever fought. The whole world had recognized their worth, had applauded their gallantry, had acknowledged their conspicuous part in the victory.

But all who returned were not as blithe and hopeful as when they went away. Some came straggling back with empty sleeves, some hobbling along on canes or crutches and some with sightless eyes that would never again behold the beauties of nature or the features of their loved ones. There were some who reeled and tottered with the lingering quakes of shell-shock, many who flinched from festering sores of mustard gas as they walked, and others whose shrieks or babblings told of minds destroyed by scientific savagery. There were wasted, cough-shattered forms that waved pathetic greetings and hurried on to government sanitariums. There were sad-faced youths who stopped only long enough to fulfill promises made to "buddies" lying beneath the poppies of Flanders Field or under the pines and oaks of Belleau Wood, from whom they brought messages of love and little tokens of remembrance to sobbing mothers, sisters, wives and sweethearts, and then hastened away to their own homes.

In a few days "our boys" laid aside their uniforms and overseas caps and service stripes and discharge papers, and went out to look for employment. Many of them failed to find it, and began to question the sincerity of all those demonstrations which had marked their going and coming. But whenever Memorial Day rolls round, and they hear the praise bestowed upon the calm, untroubled dead who feel no pangs of hunger, nor lack of sympathy, nor lash of pride, they realize that, no matter what may happen to living service men, at least the dead are not forgotten.

In Utah the boys who came back found their places awaiting them. The people at home were unchanged. They, too, had served. They, too, had gone over the top in every drive, in every demand, in every emergency. They understood and sympathized with others who had done their duty—who, moreover, had sacrificed their comforts and offered their lives in the service of their country. In the perfect accord which existed between the military representatives of the state and the army of civilians who stood behind them, Utah might be taken as a model of constancy and consistency by many an older commonwealth.

This mutual understanding and appreciation, which did not pass with the perils of war, shines in the record among the imperishable glories of Utah.
CHAPTER XXX

Fatalities of the Battlefield

"Only those are fit to live who do not fear to die," wrote Theodore Roosevelt after the tragic death of his son in France. It reads like a thrilling line from an ancient classic, and sounds like the challenge of a Trojan to his foe. A few months after he described "The Great Adventure" he, too, embarked thereon for uncharted shores, mourned by his fellow citizens and by foreigners, who regarded him as a typical fighting American. When asked what disposition to make of Quentin's remains he said: "It is our wish that he continue to lie on the spot where he fell in battle, and where the foeman buried him."

Not many parents were able to regard the loss of sons with such dauntless resignation. It mattered little that the boys they mourned had willingly placed their lives upon the altar of their country or that the oath of enlistment had prepared them for the supreme sacrifice. Nor did the plaudits of surviving "buddies" dilute the bitterness of grief. The splendor of the passing was obscured by the gloom of separation, and few parents found solace in the honors bestowed upon beloved sons who never again would enter the doors of the old homes. They saw only the empty chairs at silent tables, and crepe-hung pictures on the walls, and service stars turned to gold by the alchemy of affliction.

Death walks arm in arm with war, and "paths of glory lead but to the grave." Not all who march upon the battle ground may hope to escape its perils and live to receive their meed of laurel leaves and love. And yet, since death must come sometime and none may hide to escape his summons, it seems sublime to meet "the uncrowned king of terrors" face to face as he stalks in awful majesty across the harvest field of wrath, to hand him the flaming sword of life in dignified surrender, to ask no quarter and proudly pass, marching on to martial music amid the cheers of victorious comrades, while darkness settles down and the flickering light of memory fades upon a lingering consciousness that the people and the government so served do not forget their soldier dead.

Some of the cruelest wounds of war were not received on the field of battle; many were the missiles of pain that flew beyond the range of guns to lodge and rankle in the tender hearts of mothers, sisters, wives and sweethearts, who sat through the silent watches of the dreary nights listening in nervous dread for the coming of messengers, hearing a knell in every ringing of the phone, shrinking from every knock on the door; faint with the reaction of relief when alarms proved groundless, soul-sick with despair if the news were bad.

How they scanned the long casualty lists that were printed in the daily press! Unable to stand the torture of suspense, how frantically they sought for tidings they feared to get! Some broke under the shell-shock of apprehension; some were prostrated by the poison gas of rumors that were never verified; and some received the full impact of that ruthless blow which ended dreams of hopeful love.

"Rachel, weeping for her children, refused to be comforted because they were not." But the Lord said: "Refrain thy voice from weeping and thine eyes from tears, for thy work shall be rewarded and they shall come again from the land of the enemy." There were thousands of mourning Rachels in this country at the close of the great war and many of them refused to be comforted. Some wounds heal slowly and some never, but the disconsolate mothers of America have the satisfaction of the Spartan mothers of old, that they bore heroes, and contributed to the cause of human liberty more than could be measured out in gold.

Utah paid her share in service, coin and blood; six hundred sixty-five of her brave sons gave up their lives in the World War, over two hundred of them killed by the enemy, the others stricken by disease in the armed camps. While the remains of many were brought back at the request of relatives, some still rest where they fell, in well kept cemeteries, guarded by two governments, shrines of travelers from this and other lands, surrounded by an atmosphere of romance and glory which will endure while the greatest war of all time is remembered by a posterity who will owe much to its victors.
In the roster published herewith appear the names of all Utah boys whose lives were lost during the war. Among the two hundred and nineteen who died on the field of battle or from wounds received in action, were three commissioned officers, who fell while leading their troops. The list of battle fatalities follows:

Captain James B. Austin, Salt Lake City.
Captain P. B. Christiansen, Ephraim.
Lieut. Clarence E. Allen, Jr., Salt Lake.

CHAPTER XXXI.
Mortality Among Utah Men

Out of the twenty-one thousand men who responded to the call of their country in the World War, six hundred sixty-five will never return. Of these, two hundred nineteen were killed on the battlefield or died from wounds received in action, thirty-two were killed as a result of accidents in camp or in transit, and four hundred fourteen died from disease during their terms of enlistment.

ACCIDENTAL DEATHS

There were thirty-two deaths from accidental causes, including railway wrecks, drowning and shooting. The stars in this list indicate three casualties from aeroplane accidents.

AN ADDITIONAL LIST OF THE DEAD

In addition to the list of dead on file with the Adjutant General, the following names have been supplied by Mrs. Nellie Sandberg, chairman of the local chapter of the Gold Star Mothers' organization. Some were identified with auxiliary war work, but most of them were in the army proper. In all likelihood the official records will not be completed and correct for several years, owing to the fact that many enlisted away from home whose names may remain on the rolls of one state when they should be on those of another. If relatives and friends of deceased soldiers and sailors would be thoughtful enough to notify the Adjutant General, Capitol Building, Salt Lake City, Utah, the business of straightening out the record would be greatly facilitated. The following unofficial list contains the names of ninety others who died during their terms of enlistment:

Marines Enlisted from Utah

There were but three commissioned officers in the Marines accredited to Utah: First Lieutenant Francis A. Porter and Second Lieutenants John T. Brackon, Jr., and Bruce C. Lubers. All the wounded and gassed men were in the war zone. The stars against the names in the roster also indicate overseas service.

The U. S. Navy in the World War

The part taken by the American Navy in the great war, aside from the excellent showing made by the Marines, is sometimes overlooked because there were no important battles fought upon the seas. But the Destroyers, by their vigilance, daring and marksmanship, put many a hostile submarine out of commission and eventually drove the U-boats back to Kiel. Our war-craft patroled the coastlines, escorted ships laden with men or supplies, salvaged and assisted friendly vessels in distress, and helped the British maintain the food and fuel blockade of Europe. On the anniversary of the battle of Lexington, the first shot fired by this government in the war was sent into the hull of a German submarine by Gunner Goodwin, at the command of Captain Rice of the American liner “Magnolia.”

CHAPTER XXXV

Roster of Volunteers from Utah

In the following list of volunteers from the state of Utah the dates given are those of enlistment and discharge as they appear of record in the files of the War Department. All the wounded saw active service, and the nature of the injury is shown by the following abbreviations: "Sli" for slightly wounded, "Sev" for severely wounded, and "Du" where the degree was not made known. The seven stars in the list of wounded mark the names of commissioned officers, but in the succeeding roster of enlisted men the stars indicate those who were on duty overseas.

CHAPTER XXXVI

Roster of Inducted Men from Utah

After the act was passed for the selective draft every effort was made to divert prospective volunteers to registration offices, not only to obviate confusion but to standardize requirements, an extremely difficult undertaking owing to the natural diversity of opinions among examining physicians, but mainly because of the temperamental variations in judgment among the thousands of draft boards dealing with millions of registrants under every degree of influence. Although some eligibles did not hesitate to show reluctance about entering military service, the spontaneous response and the immense registration made it seem like an uprising of volunteers.

In the following list of inducted men from Utah are 732 wounded, all of whom were in action. The extent of disability is indicated as follows: “Sli” for slightly, “Sev” for severely, “DU” for degree unknown. In the roster of men not wounded, those who had overseas assignments, as shown in the records on file in the office of the Adjutant General, are indicated by stars against their names.

CHAPTER XXXVIII

The Small Number of Side-Steppers

Out of the twenty-one thousand men called to arms in Utah a few deserted—one from the Marines, fourteen from the Navy and forty-two from the Army. Twenty-six who gave Utah as their place of residence were dishonorably discharged from the several branches of service for different reasons. This was a very small percentage and a probability exists that a portion of them did not belong here at all. Still, there are black sheep in almost every fold and it would not be altogether surprising if some had been found in Utah where they slipped into the military organization. Soldiers are dismissed in dishonor for the same offenses that would cause them to be arrested, convicted and punished in civil life. They are the pilferers, perverts, drunkards and delicts found in any city, sometimes in the best of families. The problem they present is one for which criminologists and other scientists have long sought a practical solution.

Deserters may be irresponsible boys in quest of adventures, or incorrigible youths who rebel at discipline, or they may be congenital cowards who get panic-stricken and flee from terrors which are magnified and distorted in their feverish imaginations. As a rule they are defective creatures of stunted mentality and undeveloped character, without intelligent comprehension of those ideals and principles for which real men have stood firm in all ages. Such cravens are often more pitiable than censurable, as they have to go through life hiding and skulking, unable to escape the nagging consciousness that when manhood was needed they did not pass the test.

In time of peace there are “many men of many minds”—patriots who differ widely and honestly over policies of government, over methods by which to assert our national rights, and the best means to defend our honor as a nation and preserve our self respect as a people. This is not only permissible but desirable in an era of peace. In a time of war, however, when the die is cast and the bugle call to arms has been sounded, there are but two classes of residents with whom to reckon: Those who are with the Flag and those who are not; on the one hand people who, to the extent of their ability and opportunity, are ready and willing to go ahead and make whatever sacrifices may be required; on the other hand able-bodied people who seek to avoid the sacrifices, to evade the obligations, to escape the dangers, to discourage their fellows, to embarrass their government and to discredit those in command. Into these two general classes may inhabitants of a country at war be divided.

The first includes civilians who do their part and those who constitute the fighting force, each of which is absolutely indispensable to the other. The second class embraces traitors, slackers and conscientious objectors, as well as the weaklings who desert or disgrace the colors. There were but few residents of Utah in our recent war whose sympathies inclined to a hostile power, who seemed ready to extend aid and comfort to agents or emissaries of the enemy. All such were promptly interned whenever a treasonable attitude was revealed by an overt act. Slackers were draft-evaders who obtained immunity from service by offering dishonest excuses and fictitious alibis, or, failing in this, became fugitives from conscription.

Conscientious objectors were those who tried to make it appear that they were different from other Americans because of their opposition to war. Their country might be menaced, invaded, plundered and ravished like Belgium, for all they would do to prevent it. They were glad to enjoy the blessings and to revel in the opportunities of a land whose independence was won by the sword, whose integrity was maintained by the sword, and they always managed to appropriate their share of the fruits and comforts of victory. But the risks and hardships were not for them.

No class of citizens holds a copyright on conscientious objection to war; we are all opposed to such shedding of human blood; we all deerey the deplorable barbarity of mortal combat; we are conscientiously opposed to the taking of risks we can honorably elude; we neither provoked nor welcomed the great conflict; we didn’t want our boys to challenge death on the seas or in the trenches; bombs and bayonets were to them as fatal as they would have been to conscientious objectors; poison gas and liquid fire would not have been more painful or dreadful to those who took early refuge in convenient scruples than they were to the boys who actually felt in their faces these blighting blasts from the furnace of hell.

The men who went to the front were not advocates of slaughter. They hated the war and felt the pang of separation from loved ones, the relinquishment of comforts, the abandonment of business, as keenly as any of these considerations might have affected conscientious objectors. They didn't relish the endless drill, the daily grind, the weary march, the crowded ships, the muddy fields, the grime and dust and bursting shells, and the hand-to-hand encounters with men against whom they had no personal grievance. It wasn't a personal matter. They went because, in their loyal souls, they sensed the approaching peril of autocratic aggression, they realized their country's need and would not shrink from the clear call to duty.

With the prophetic vision of patriots they could see beyond the smoke and flame of battle something on the horizon of the future worth fighting and dying for. But our conscientious objectors, safely ensconced behind the Sixth Commandment, enjoying to the limit of their selfish security the bloody heritage of at least three wars, rolled their eyes upward after the manner of the sanctimonious Pharisees of old, and thanked God they were not as other Americans.

There was a time when these monitors of prudence who preach and practice a policy of peace at any price were confined to a single cult or sect. But as human ingenuity increases the destructiveness of war so human discretion will doubtless multiply the sources from which this doctrine trickles in a corrosive stream towards the foundation stones of our government.
THERE WERE FEW SLACKERS IN UTAH

There was a college athlete who ran a speedy race;
He entered all the matches and he always took first place.
But when his country called him he answered to his name
And pleaded for exemption on the ground that he was lame.
Poor boy, pity him, for he was trained to run
As fast as he could step it from the firing of a gun.

There was a youthful prodigy, a hero of the mat,
As powerful as a grizzly and as nimble as a cat.
But when his country called him he had an awful cough—
The family doctor begged so hard they had to let him off.
Poor boy, pity him, there was no antidote—
He couldn't quit his coughing when his heart was in his throat.

There was a husky pugilist and he was very strong;
No one could strike so hard a blow, no one could stay so long.
But when his country called him, it gave him such a start,
He never quite recovered from a palpitating heart.
Poor boy, pity him, a battler he was known,
But when the shells burst overhead he crawled into his own.

There was a billiard champion who never failed to score;
He walked around the tables for a thousand miles or more.
But when his country called him he sank upon a seat,
And proved he was disabled by the flatness of his feet.
Poor boy, pity him, he couldn't be enrolled
Because his feet would flatten out whenever they got cold.

There was a man of leisure hours who led an easy life;
He lived upon his parents till he got a working wife.
But when his country called him he took the case to court
And proved by all his relatives they needed his support.
Poor boy, pity him, although he seemed to shirk,
He merely showed a dread of war when he preferred to work.

They hung around the pool-rooms or they loafed upon the street,
They ran about or stood or danced upon their fragile feet.
Their minds were on their comforts and their hearts were full of dread;
So when the sergeant sought for them he looked beneath the bed.
Poor boys, pity them, it wasn't any use,
For every time their country called they offered an excuse.

But from ten million loyal homes ten million heroes sprang.
And round the earth the echoes of their prompt responses rang.
They came from schools and shops and farms—were clean and strong and fit,
To battle for humanity and glad to do their bit.
Good boys, honor them, for with the flag unfurled,
They fought for weaker nations and for peace throughout the world.
CHAPTER XXXIX

What Armistice Day Means

By the anniversaries a nation holds sacred may be measured the liberty, intelligence and aspirations of her people. In some lands they celebrate the blood-stained victories of ambitious kings. In others they extol their plunder of the weak by conquest and acquisition. And some holidays commemorate the riots and massacres of anarchy. In the United States of America we glorify no triumphs of force and greed. We observe the day that forecasts "peace on earth, good will to men." We set apart one day in which to decorate the graves of those who died for their country. We hallow the day that keeps in mind the birth of our independence as a nation. We consecrate one day to the cause of labor. We have a day of thanksgiving for the blessings we enjoy. And there are days devoted to patriots whose virtues are cherished traditions of a peace-loving people. These are our holidays.

In this category we might with perfect consistency include Armistice Day. It should be designated a holiday of universal thanksgiving. On the 11th of November, 1918, the tribunal of Might passed sentence on its most zealous adherents. The crime of 1914 drew light punishment when the culprits who defied and defiled civilization were simply disarmed and the arch conspirators against peace and liberty were merely banished from their respective realms. That the contemplated dismantlement of thrones was to be thorough, since the several crowns were seemingly battered beyond repair, appeared to satisfy the rest of the world. It was not vengeance mankind wanted but security for the future. More drastic or individual punishment could be left to time and fate.

When the armistice pact was formulated there were some who felt that the terms were too severe. It provided for the disarmament and dissolution of the enemy's armies, for destruction of its navy and air fleet, for evacuation of all territory held outside of the empire, for Entente occupation of strategic points on German soil pending a final adjustment, and for indemnities to be agreed upon at a later date. It was accepted with little discussion and no amendments, constituting a surrender so abject that it has no parallel in history. But milder terms would not have met the situation at all. The complete overthrow of predatory militarism by triumphant democracies could not await debate at the peace table. It had to be accomplished and acknowledged in the field where the issue had been presented. That physical force had succumbed to superior physical force settled nothing for good. The monster of military despotism had to be hamstrung and chained. While generous adversaries felt that some consideration was due the distracted people of the defeated countries, there was to be no quarter for autocracy or militarism. This attitude was not prompted by a spirit of vengeance but by a commendable desire to make a true and lasting peace.

Armistice Day marks the end of military despotism. There may be future wars but never again will autocracy be able to compel an intelligent people to shoulder the intolerable burden of maintaining its body guard. The end of "kultur" was the beginning of enlightenment. The evil influence which transformed a hard-working, home-loving, studious and sentimental people into an organized corps of cruel, wasteful home-burners and baby-killers, was broken. Of all who engaged in that sanguinary strife none may have greater cause to rejoice than the vanquished. It is true they will have to bear the heavy obligations in which their leaders involved them, but they will be rid of the incubus of military oppression which had bowed their backs for generations, which had banished their restive kinsmen, which had moistened the soil of many lands with the blood of their sons and brothers. They have learned important lessons omitted from the curriculum of imperialism—that Might does not mean Right, and that the divinity of kings is a fraud and a sham.

Armistice Day brought to the chastened German people not only relief but revelation. They saw the feet of clay as their idol leaped the dykes of Holland. They saw their braggart heroes surrender every thing but their running boots. They saw the careful preparations of fifty years overturned by the hasty efforts of necessity and desperation. They saw the untrained troops of an unmilitary government demolish fighting machines which were deemed invincible. They saw their zeapelins driven from the skies and their submarines chased from the seas. They saw "the day" of toasts and threats fade in the dusk of ignominious capitulation. For the god of Kaiserism was not the God of Heaven.

This is an anniversary which should be observed by all civilized people who believe that obligations of honor and the mandates of justice are as binding on governments as they are on individuals; an anniversary which should be kept holy in the name of liberty, the white winged angel of eternal progress; a date which we should make a legal holiday in honor of those who crossed the mine-strewn ocean, took their places in the far-flung battle line on alien soil, stood and slept in muddy trenches and faced death and disease to make the world a better place in which to live.

Who that took part in the first celebration will ever forget the delirious joy which followed the heart-wracking suspense of an anxious world? Professional men locked their offices, business men closed their doors, clerks deserted their desks and counters. Every available vehicle was commandeered for parades which kept milling through the crowded streets. Banners fluttered from every flagstaff and confetti floated in the air like flakes of snow. Men yelled themselves hoarse. Fathers cried in the joy of deliverance and mothers fainted with relaxation of the tension under which they had been living. Whistles, horns, drums and dishpans played an inharmonious but enthusiastic accompaniment to the songs and cheers of many millions of delighted people in Europe, Asia, Africa, Australia and the two Americas. The most dignified citizens performed childish capers. "Grave and reverend seniors" blew tin horns in people's ears or kicked tin cans along the streets in the hysterical ebullitions of surcharged souls. The whole world, except in gloomy palaces which the sunshine had not yet penetrated, gave fervent thanks in words and thoughts and actions. Even the German soldiers rejoiced. When the word was passed along the front that no shots were to be exchanged after the eleventh hour of the eleventh day of the eleventh month of the year 1918, a mighty cheer followed and men arose from the trenches and embankments on both sides of no-man's land and waved their caps and shouted.

Armistice Day ought to be a festival of international observance, a day of thanksgiving for humanity, an independence day for popular government throughout the world, a memorial day for heroes who died to preserve the ideals of civilization, a day that recalls the rise of a new star of promise in the east, a day that partakes of the holy attributes of all our holidays combined.

Should it be so designated by the several allied governments, it might cement the ties of brotherhood more closely than would any league or treaty, and the beautiful sentiment behind it might oft prevail against misunderstandings which sometimes lead to war. It might bring on a time of celebration when the men and women of many nations would smile and cheer in unison, when in distant lands they would look upon the emblem of our republic with pleasure, perhaps with gratitude and possibly with reverence.

Such a conquest of the world would not conflict with our ideals and professions.

The End.
